What JFK Means to Me

By Uliana Gunder

John. Fitzgerald. Kennedy was the 35th president of United States. He was born in Brookline on Beals St. He was the youngest president ever elected in United States

John. Fitzgerald. Kennedy was very competitive, I think that helped him become a good and important president that we remember today.

John. F. Kennedy was very competitive four example when he played chicken with his older brother and wanted to win. The way to play chicken is 2 people go on their bikes opposite directions and when they meet the first one to swerve loses the game. This happened to John. F. Kennedy and he had to get 28 stitches.

The way John. F. Kennedy had to be competitive in running for president is he had to say the right words and outsmart the other person running for president and say what he thinks the people want to hear it's like a game of risk.

John. F. Kennedy was competitive while the space race in these ways: he had to get the materials before Russia, next he had to get the people that wanted to do it and last he had to launch the space ship before Russia did.

I am also very competitive like John. F. Kennedy I really dislike losing a game when I am playing with my family but I understand that losing is also important. Thats how Jhorn. F. Kennedy was very competitive and a good and important president.
