What JFK Means to Me

JFK was a great person and had to stand up to challenges a lot of times. When he faced those challeges he was always very brave.

One brave thing Jack did was when his older brother Joe challenged him to a bikerace. Jack said, "Sure bet ya I could beat you!" Joe said that they were going around the block and when they met, who ever swerved was a chicken. Jack agreed and they took off on their bikes. When they met niether swerved. They crashed. CRASH! Joe got up and dusted himself. Jack was on the floor bleeding blood as red as a fire truck. He got 28 stiches from that incident. He didn't even cry.

Another brave thing Jack did happened when Jack was in the navy and was commander of a boat called the PT-109. Suddenly, a Japanese destroyer came and cut their boat in half. Two men were killed and one was badly burned. They were forced to swim. John Fitzgerald Kennedy took the injured man's straps and they swam for four hours in a sea full of sharks. That was brave of JFK. I know I couldn't of done that. They found a deserted island.

I'm interested in JFK because it's unusual and brave and he never said no to a challenge. This could help me if I have a problem or possibly have an enemy. I wish I could be as bold, brave, strong, and peaceful as JFK. I also wish he was still alive.
