What J.F.K Means to Me

Jasmine Li
May 18, 2011

J.F.K was thoughtful and fair. He wanted people to think about other people, not only about themselves. He felt that everyone should be happy and lead a life where they have what they need. When he was president he cared for people all over the world.

The Peace Corps is an organization that helps people all over the world who need food, a shelter, help from a nurse or doctor, and other things. John. F. Kennedy created the Peace Corps because he wanted everyone to have a home, food, and be happy.

The Peace Corps is important because someone has a sick child then the Peace Corps could send a nurse or if someone couldn't grow enough food then the Peace Corps could send someone to help them grow food.

J.E.K and I are alike because we both help other people and we both create things to help other people. Here are some ways I help other people today: I can help my mom wipe the floor or I can clean room so my parents have more time to do other things. I also help them by setting the table so they can do things they have to do a little longer before a meal. Also I help my friends with homework if they get stuck on something. I care about the Peace Corps because it helps people live happy lives and it could help everyone to have food and a shelter.