

Herb Gedney: The weather we worked in and worked on the planes was not ideal but it did get done. We had covers at some kind and pictures show how we lived and how the planes were taken care of.

The weather was always ... it went from, always went from bad to worse.

[rustling of paper] In continuation of the weather: the Aleutian Islands are the only place in the world where high winds and fog occur at the same time. Another phenomenon is the williwaw, a local name given to the fierce winds that originate [phone ringing] in the mountains and gust up to 140 knots.
