Welcome to Fire Island

It is time for warm weather, bright sunny days, and the lazy days of summer. This year everyone wants to know: “How is Fire Island?” “How are the beaches?” “What happened to the wildlife and where did the deer go during the hurricane?” “How is the William Floyd Estate?” “Did the Sunken Forest get flooded?” These questions are in response to the impact of “Superstorm” Sandy on Fire Island National Seashore.

Hurricane Sandy arrived on October 29, 2012, dramatically affecting Fire Island and Long Island. The high surf and powerful winds over-washed Fire Island and in many places leveled the dunes, burying vegetation and depositing sand in low lying areas of Fire Island, raising the elevation of the center of the island some three to four feet. Salt water and salt spray burned and in some instances killed island vegetation. Wildlife found refuge in thickets and dens and some had their burrows flooded or buried in deep sand.

Fire Island National Seashore’s system of boardwalks and dune crossings saw extensive damage. All dune staircases were damaged or destroyed and the boardwalks at the Fire Island Lighthouse and the Wilderness Visitor Center were completely destroyed. Some walks at Sailors Haven and Watch Hill were buried in sand. At Old Inlet a breach was opened and the boardwalk, primitive restroom and dock were lost.

Since the storm the Seashore staff and others have been working to repair the damage to have the park open for the summer. Upon return it may appear to visitors that things are back the way they were before the storm but Fire Island has changed. Barrier islands are dynamic systems that depend on events like Sandy for nourishment and revitalization. Fire Island’s ever-changing, dynamic landscape is core to its very nature and change—sometimes subtle, sometimes dramatic—is part of what draws us to this unique and special place.

So come and visit: the Lighthouse is still a beacon; the Sunken Forest, protected by a massive double dune system, remains a secluded wonderland; deer and fox are evident throughout the park; the breach at Old Inlet reinforces Fire Island’s cycles of change; and the Old Mastic House at the William Floyd Estate withstood yet another storm as it has so many others before. Enjoy the shorelines, ocean waves and the calm of the bay knowing that these will be different, come another day and another season. Join a ranger-guided program to learn about the ever-changing beach and the rich plant and animal life that abounds on Fire Island. Come learn about three centuries of life and change on Long Island at the William Floyd Estate. Fire Island National Seashore is open for the summer of 2013. WELCOME BACK!

Fire Island National Seashore was established in September 1964

“for the purpose of conserving and preserving for the use of future generations certain relatively unspoiled and undeveloped beaches, dunes, and other natural features within Suffolk County, New York, which possess high values to the Nation.”

Barrier Beach Evolution

Fire Island is a dynamic barrier island, a sliver of sand in flux. Each day the wind and waves toss sand about the beach, rearranging the shoreline. Intermittent storm events drive the slow rolling over of the island upon itself, like a conveyor belt of sand slowly inching northward. The gradual movement of the barrier island is hard to see and, oftentimes, it isn't until our natural surroundings are dramatically transformed that we take note.

After Hurricane Sandy struck on October 29, 2012, for instance, the changes to the barrier beach were hard to overlook. The history-making hurricane brought with it high water levels and large waves that scoured sand from the dunes and beach face. In some places, the force of moving water pushed sand over the top of dunes and across the width of the island. Afterwards, the barrier island looked otherworldly. The beach was low and wide and, free from debris, the layers of garnet, magnetite, and quartz sand crystals shone a brilliant red and white at the edge of the sea. Gnarled roots poked through the clean white sand where dunes once stood.

But sand was not lost entirely; rather, it was rearranged. Some of the sand scoured from the beach face was moved offshore and will be gradually returned by the sea, building up the beach and the foot of surviving dunes. These dune remnants, eroded to near vertical cliffs during Hurricane Sandy, have already begun to redevelop, slumping and sliding from steeply scarped features to a more stable position, and the sand carried by wind and waves has helped to form these dunes into the rounded mounds of sand we are used to seeing on Fire Island.

In areas where sand was pushed over the top of dunes and northward toward the bay, natural dune rebuilding is also taking place but the development of the tall, wide dunes we saw before Hurricane Sandy will take more time. The wind and waves will carry sand to the upper beach, beachgrass will take hold and stabilize the sand, and dune crests will once again rise along the island's spine—if only in a more northerly position. The sand carried through these over-washed areas helps to make the island more resilient to future storms by increasing the elevation of the island's interior and bayside.

The constant shaping and reshaping of the barrier island landscape by the wind and waves is punctuated by powerful storm events like Hurricane Sandy. While storms can result in drastic landscape change virtually overnight, these larger-scale shifts also serve as a reference point from which we can observe the more gradual and continual processes of change that are always happening. All changes, whether gradual or sudden, subtle or obvious, serve to shape our shoreline and are an integral part of the evolution of the barrier island landscape.

Dunes began to redevelop just weeks after Hurricane Sandy.

Sand moved northward from the duneline to the island's interior and bayside during Hurricane Sandy. This elevated the island, making it more resilient to future storms.

Backcountry Camping

Under the stars, listening to the sounds of the surf, backcountry camping on Fire Island can be a memorable experience. Available by permit only, backcountry campers may camp in one of two zones within the Otis Pike Fire Island High Dune Wilderness year-round, or on the beach in front of each zone from March 15-Labor Day.

Safety and Things to Know

Enjoy Fire Island Safely

Please follow these safety guidelines for an enjoyable visit:

- Stay on boardwalks to avoid poison ivy and ticks.
- Wear shoes on boardwalks to avoid splinters.
- Avoid grassy areas and check yourself frequently for ticks.
- Use sunscreen and insect repellent as needed.
- Follow safe boating procedures and etiquette, and wear life jackets.
- Swim only in lifeguarded areas.
- Watch for rapid changes in weather conditions and lightning when on or near the water.

Poison Ivy—leaves of three, let it be!

Please boat safely!

Only swim in lifeguarded areas.

Adhere to all Park Rules

All natural and cultural features within Fire Island National Seashore are protected by law. Thank you for respecting regulations.

- Stay off the dunes and do not damage plants.
- Do not feed, touch, or harass wildlife; animals can be unpredictable and dangerous.
- When and where permitted, pets must be on a 6-foot leash and under physical control.
- Pets, kites, and glass containers are not permitted on lifeguarded beaches.
- Stay out of all areas fenced for wildlife and plant protection.
- Metal detectors are not permitted on seashore lands.
- Building ground fires is strictly prohibited.
- Dispose of trash properly. Day use visitors are asked to participate in the park's Carry-In, Carry-Out program to reduce garbage on the island.
- Personal watercraft (PWC) use is only permitted in the marked channels into some Fire Island communities. PWCs must remain at least 1,000 feet away from the Atlantic Ocean shore. In the Great South Bay, PWCs must be 1,000 feet away from shore on the western end of Fire Island and 4,000 feet away from the shore, east of the western boundary of Sunken Forest. PWCs are not permitted into Sailors Haven, Barrett Beach/Talisman, Watch Hill or Old Inlet.
- Additional regulations are enforced.

See <http://www.nps.gov/fiis/parkmgmt/lawsandpolicies.htm>

Good Questions

May I collect seashells?

Yes, but only those shells that no longer have a living creature inside.

Where are the trash cans?

Fire Island National Seashore has a carry in/ carry out policy. Please protect wildlife and help keep the island clean by properly disposing of your trash back on the mainland.

May I fish in the breach at Old Inlet?

No. The breach is closed to all activities due to safety and resource protection concerns.

Have more questions?

Ask any park ranger or park volunteer; call the Office of Interpretation at 631-687-4780 or check our website at www.nps.gov/fiis

Park Map

Fire Island Lighthouse

The Fire Island Lighthouse, constructed in 1858, offers a chance to experience maritime history through a guided tour of the lighthouse tower, exhibits inside the keeper's quarters, a look at the historic first order Fresnel lens, and a walk around the site.

Sailors Haven

Sailors Haven is home to the 250-300 year old Sunken Forest, a globally rare maritime forest. Facilities include a public marina, visitor center and bookstore, concessions, nature trail, and lifeguarded beach.

Watch Hill

Watch Hill features a rich, extensive salt marsh and access to the Otis Pike Fire Island High Dune Wilderness. Facilities include the National Seashore's only campground, a public marina, visitor center and bookstore, concessions, nature trail, and lifeguarded beach.

Otis Pike Fire Island High Dune Wilderness

The Otis Pike Fire Island High Dune Wilderness extends for seven miles between the Wilderness Visitor Center and Watch Hill. It is the only federally designated wilderness area in New York state. Facilities include a visitor center and bookstore, and nature trail.

William Floyd Estate

Located in Mastic Beach, the estate was home to William Floyd, a signer of the Declaration of Independence, and eight generations of the Floyd family. Visitors can tour the Old Mastic house (on guided tour only), grounds, and Floyd family cemetery. Facilities include the Old Mastic House, trails, and a bookstore.

Fire Island is home to several threatened and endangered species including the piping plover.

Cooperating Associations & Friends Groups

Eastern National

Eastern National, a non-profit cooperating association, is dedicated to the preservation and use of the parks for the benefit of all. Operating in more than 150 national parks and other public trusts, Eastern National provides quality educational products and services to visitors through their sales facilities. Sales from these facilities allow Eastern National to make donations to the national parks. Fire Island National Seashore has four bookstores, located at the Sailors Haven, Watch Hill, and Wilderness Visitor Centers, and at the William Floyd Estate.

Fire Island Lighthouse Preservation Society

Formed in 1982 in response to the possible demolition of the Fire Island Lighthouse, FILPS raised over 1.2 million dollars to save and restore it. In 1996, the nonprofit group partnered with the National Park Service to maintain and operate the Lighthouse. In 2006, the FILPS signed a Cooperating Association Agreement to continue its support through a program of visitor services, research, sales, membership and fundraising activities.

Did You Know?

- * In the mid-1970s, Fire Island's white-tailed deer herd consisted of about 50 individuals. By 2005, the deer population was estimated to be 500-700. In 2012, deer numbers on Fire Island were estimated to be 300-500.
- * Several generations of Floyd family women planted trees around the William Floyd Estate's Old Mastic House. You can still see some of those same trees today. Several big trees are now more than 150 years old.
- * The Otis Pike Fire Island High Dune Wilderness was named for New York Congressman Otis G. Pike, who served from 1961-1979, and co-sponsored the bill to create Fire Island National Seashore in 1964. The Fire Island Wilderness was designated in 1980.
- * The first Fire Island Lighthouse was built at the end of Fire Island in 1826. Today, the Fire Island Inlet is more than five miles west of this foundation. You can see the remnants of the first structure when you visit the present lighthouse, constructed in 1858.
- * Fire Island National Seashore was established on September 11, 1964 and will be celebrating its 50th anniversary in 2014.
