

Pets

Pets and their owners can have very special relationships. However, a national park is not always the best place for pets. Rocky Mountain National Park is a designated natural area and its purpose is to preserve and protect the park's natural conditions, scenic beauties and wildlife.

Dogs are predators. Dogs can chase, scare and transmit diseases to wild animals. Dogs leave behind a 'predator' scent typical of all wild canines like coyotes. This scent can linger in the area for long periods of time and can disrupt or alter the behavior of the native animals this park protects. Dogs can bite humans and some people are uncomfortable around dogs; park visitors should be able to enjoy native wildlife in their natural environment without disruption from other people's pets. Pets may dig or trample fragile vegetation. Additionally, park regulations help protect your pet's well-being; your pet could become prey for wildlife, including coyotes, mountain lions, bobcats and owls.

Backcountry Use

PETS ARE PROHIBITED IN ALL AREAS OF ROCKY MOUNTAIN NATIONAL PARK NOT ACCESSIBLE BY MOTOR VEHICLES, including ALL trails and meadows

Frontcountry Use

Pets may accompany you in the following areas of the park:

- Along established roads or in parking areas
- Within established campgrounds and picnic areas

Pets must be kept on leashes no longer than six feet. Pet owners must pick up and dispose of pet excrement in trash receptacles. Pets may not make noise that impacts visitors or wildlife.

When Your Pet is Here

Pet owners have the special responsibility of following park rules for pets. For the safety of your pet and the benefit of the park wildlife and other visitors, pets should not be left unattended. You may not leave your pet unattended in vehicles if it creates a danger to the animal or if the animal becomes a public nuisance. Pets may not be left tied to vehicles, trees or other objects.

Even in the mountains, interior temperatures of vehicles rise quickly and pets left in vehicles can overheat and die. A Stanford University School of Medicine study proved that temperatures inside cars can rise dramatically, even on mild days. A car's interior temperature can increase by an average of 40 degrees within an hour, with 80 percent of that increase in the first 30 minutes. A cracked window provides little relief from the rate of heating nor the final temperature.

Doggy daycare, boarding facilities and veterinary clinics are available in nearby communities.

Physiologically, pets, more than humans, are susceptible to overheating.

Service animals that have been individually trained to perform specific tasks for the benefit of persons with disabilities are allowed in the park. Emotional support ("therapy animals") are not service animals under the Americans with Disabilities Act and may not access trails or other non-motorized areas.

Pet owners violating park regulations will be cited, fined, and/or issued a mandatory appearance before the United States Magistrate Court in Denver.

Leashed pets are permitted on some Rocky Mountain National Park roads when those roads are closed in winter to motor vehicles. Check with a visitor center or call 970-586-1206 for current status.

U. S. Forest Service Options

The Arapaho and Roosevelt National Forest surrounds Rocky Mountain National Park on all sides. All trails in the national forest are open to pets. Some trails require pets to be leashed. Always check for local conditions.
