

National Trails

Color the Trails

Pioneers on the overland trails often saw and heard wolves — especially at night as they prowled around the livestock herds hoping to catch a fat sheep or cow for supper. Many trail travelers were afraid of wolves and thought their howls were scary. Gray wolves in our national parks today like to hunt deer, elk, and bison.

GRAY WOLF

NPS/Cheyne Warren