Assembling History: The Big Horn River Before the Dam Collection
Accession No: BICA-00214 Catalog No: BICA 5408
Finding Aid

Description:

This collection consists of historic movies, photographs, journals and oral histories depicting life along the Bighorn River prior to and during the building of the Yellowtail Dam. Construction on the Yellowtail Dam began in 1961 and the last bucket of concrete was placed in the dam during October 1965. The collection focuses on three particular themes: The stories of life along the Bighorn River, the building of the Yellowtail Dam, and the work of Eddy Hulbert, a silversmith who worked at the Hillsboro.

Copyright:

This collection contains materials not owned by the National Park Service and therefore may have additional restrictions or copyright concerns. Please refer to the in-depth copyright section of this document for additional information.

Acquisition:

This collection was developed through a CESU agreement between the University of Montana and Bighorn Canyon National Recreation Area.

Processing:

This collection was processed and cataloged at Bighorn Canyon National Recreation Area by Cindy Hagen in 2013 and completed by Danielle Peck In 2014.

Arrangement:

This collection is arranged into the following series:

- Series I: Collections
- Series II: Project Files 2010-2013

Extent:

This collection totals 4 LF.

COPYRIGHT AND RESTRICTIONS

The copyright law of the United States (Title 17, United States Code) governs the making of photocopies or other reproductions of copyrighted materials. The various state privacy acts govern the use of materials that document private individuals, groups, and corporations.

Under certain conditions specified in the law, libraries and archives are authorized to furnish a reproduction if the document does not infringe the privacy rights of an individual, group, or corporation. These specified conditions of authorized use include:

- ☐ non-commercial and non-profit study, scholarship, or research, or teaching
- ☐ criticism, commentary, or news reporting
- ☐ as a NPS preservation or security copy
- ☐ as a research copy for deposit in another institution

If a user later uses a copy or reproduction for purposes in excess of "fair use," the user may be personally liable for copyright, privacy, or publicity infringement. This institution's permission to obtain a photographic, xerographic, digital, or other copy of a document doesn't indicate permission to publish, exhibit, perform, reproduce, sell, distribute, or prepare derivative works from this document without first obtaining permission from the copyright holder and from any private individual, group, or corporation shown or otherwise recorded.

Permission to publish, exhibit, perform, reproduce, prepare derivative works from, sell, or otherwise distribute the item must be obtained by the user separately in writing from the holder of the original copyright (or if the creator is dead from his/her heirs) as well as from any individual(s), groups, or corporations whose name, image, recorded words, or private information (e.g., employment information) may be reproduced in the source material. The holder of the original copyright isn't necessarily the National Park Service. The National Park Service is not legally liable for copyright, privacy, or publicity infringement when materials are wrongfully used after being provided to researchers for "fair use."

This institution reserves the right to refuse to accept a copying order if fulfillment of the order is judged in violation of copyright or federal or state privacy or publicity law.

History:

Bighorn Canyon National Recreation Area visitor centers are located at both Fort Smith, MT and Lovell, WY. Visitors have shared stories of their experiences recreating and living along the Bighorn River and about the building of the Yellowtail Dam with park rangers over the years. No concerted effort had occurred to document these stories for posterity prior to this project.

The Bighorn River has had a history of adventure. In 1825, Jim Bridger person to navigate the river through Bighorn Canyon, and later spoke of rugged canyons, of rivers forming jagged rocks between lofty overhanging precipices. Doc Barry realized the recreational potential of Bighorn Canyon and began actively recruiting tourists to his Cedarvale/Hillsboro Ranch. Eddy Hulbert worked on Doc's boats and became known as a talented silversmith selling spurs and belt buckles to Dryhead residents and through catalogs. The park has acquired a few samples of his work, and has restored his house and blacksmith shop at the Hillsboro Ranch.

In 1944, the United States government announced formal plans to pursue a large, multi-purpose dam on the Crow Reservation, at the mouth of Bighorn Canyon, as part of the Pick-Sloan Plan. Between 1944 and 1958, tribal leaders from the Crow Tribe opposed the federal government's ability to condemn tribal lands, debated what constituted fair compensation for the water-power rights to the Bighorn River, and above all attempted to protect the sovereignty of the Crow Tribe. An agreement was reached in 1956 with the Crow Tribe, although legal proceedings were not complete until 1963. In addition, communities, such as Kane, WY had their lands purchased or condemned by the Bureau of Reclamation and forced to relocate.

On April 24, 1961, the Bureau awarded the main contract for the construction of the dam which continued until October 1965. At the height of activity, the Yellowtail jobsite employed more than 700 workers. For some, the opportunity to build the dam was an adventure—one that paid well, offered excitement, and influenced their lives for years to come. For others, the experience building the Yellowtail was a decidedly negative experience, one filled with back-straining labor, unyielding bosses, and life-threatening situations.

This project has taken the time to collect the stories of some of the individuals who lived, worked, and adventured along the Bighorn River prior to and during the building of the Yellowtail Dam. The items collected through this project by no way represent all of the stories but give a small window into the rich and tumultuous history of life along the Bighorn River.

Scope:

This collection consists of historic movies, photographs, journals and oral histories depicting life along the Bighorn River prior to and during the building of the Yellowtail Dam. The collection focuses on three particular themes: The stories of life along the Bighorn River, the building of the Yellowtail Dam, and the work of Eddy Hulbert, a silversmith who worked at the Hillsboro.
