Oh, Abe Lincoln

Oh, Abe Lincoln what were you thinking
The day the you were born,
Did you ever know that out of all
The presidents in the famous hall you
Would be the one to overshadow them all?

Oh, Abe Lincoln what were you thinking
The day that your mother died,
I bet that you cried and cried,
Until your father brought home a new bride.

Oh, Abe Lincoln what were you thinking
When you saw your first slave,
Did you ever know that with your
Proclamation so brave
You would be the one to set them all free?

Oh, Abe Lincoln what were you thinking
When the Civil War broke out,
Did you ever know that with you and
The union men, we would be the one to win?

Oh, Abe Lincoln what were you thinking
The minute you were shot,
Did you know that when you died
Our country would be in distraught?

Oh, Abe Lincoln we miss you dear
And we wish that you were still here.
No matter what you did
That never hid
The fact that you're the greatest president of all.
