SUMMER

Old fire sites are where I thrive.
In the summer I come alive.
My bright pink color covers the ground.
Large open spaces are where I am found.

What am I?

I live in a pack with my family; my mom, my dad, and my siblings, you see.
Sometimes I snarl, sometimes I growl.
Sometimes I bark, and sometimes I howl.

What am I?

I like to soar way up high.
You should look for me up in the sky.
Great American stories I behold.
My head is white, but I'm not old.

What am I?

AUTUMN

The pond is where I am when I'm building my dam. I use my teeth with ease for chopping down big, big trees.

What am I?

You can find me in the forest eating the birch. Spruce branches and boughs are where I perch. My crown is bright red, on top of my head, easy to spot when you search.

What am I?

I'm skinny and tall and not that small. I grow in harsh places and live in tight spaces. In the winter I am seen because my needles stay green.

What am I?

I munch on berries all day long. So delicious, how could I go wrong? But every once in a while I get a treat, by snacking on a squirrel or some other tasty meat.

What am I?

WINTER

In the summer I'm brown and in the winter I'm white. I'll hop away if you give me a fright. You might confuse me with a rabbit, but that's just a bad habit.

What am I?

My colors grace the winter sky. To find me you must look up high. My lights parade red, green, and blue. Caught a glimpse of me? Lucky you!

What am I?

My long legs help me walk. The willows are where I stalk. In the summer my antlers grow, and in the winter they leave with the snow.

What am I?

Beaver

Did you know that if I wasn't constantly using my teeth, they would keep growing and growing and growing?

Grizzly bear

Did you know that my hair is shaggy and "grizzled," which gives me my name?

Moose

Did you know that I am the largest member of the deer family?
