Dear Sanvi,

I wanted to write to you to tell you about how excited I am for our upcoming trip together to Chicago in the Springtime from March 11th-16th. I am happy we chose to visit Chicago because that is where my brother lives, and I am looking forward to seeing him. I looked at the weather for when we are going, and it is supposed to be 33 degrees Fahrenheit during the daytime and 17 degrees Fahrenheit during the nighttime. The weather report also mentioned snow on March 13th. It sounds like it is going to be very cold!

To plan for our trip and the weather in Chicago, we should each bring one heavy jacket, four sweatshirts, three pairs of pants to keep warm, and plenty of socks. We should probably pack our boots too, so our feet don't get cold. The plan is to go visit Millennium Park on the first day and take photos of the art sculptures there. On the snowy day, I think we should go to the Art Institute Museum to stay warm and look at all the paintings. I hear they have a fun spot called Navy Pier to grab some food and walk near Lake Michigan that we should visit on the fourth day. I bet there is a lot of ice!

I am so excited for our trip and to see my brother again. Are there any activities you want to add to our trip to Chicago?

I hope all is well with you Sanvi!

Sincerely,

Alex
