Preface

Frederick Law Olmsted, Sr. is widely recognized as America's premier landscape architect. His accomplishments in the fields of park design, conservation, town planning, and landscape architecture have national and international significance. Olmsted's legacy includes city and state parks, school and college campuses, institutional grounds, private estates, suburban communities, zoos, and arboretums. Olmsted was also a passionate advocate for the preservation of America's natural resources and the creation of state and national parks.<sup>1</sup>

After work on such landmarks as Central Park and Prospect Park in New York, Olmsted returned to his native New England to plan the Boston Park System. In 1883 at his Brookline home, he established the first full-scale professional office dedicated to landscape architecture in the United States. Following his retirement in 1897, Olmsted's stepson, John Charles, became the senior partner of the firm. The company assumed the name Olmsted Brothers when Frederick Law Olmsted, Jr. joined the business. The firm rapidly expanded under the leadership of the brothers, and, over the years, to accommodate this growth, a rambling complex of offices was added to the family residence.

Olmsted Jr. was the last member of the family to be associated with the business. Like his father, he contributed a great deal to advancing the profession of landscape architecture. He was instrumental in drafting the legislation for the inception of the National Park Service in 1916 and throughout his life was very much involved in furthering the cause of national and state parks. Olmsted Jr. retired in 1950, but the partners retained the name "Olmsted Brothers" until 1961 when the firm became "Olmsted Associates." By the late 1970s, the business activity of the firm had declined appreciably. In 1980, the National Park Service acquired the site and archives and set about restoring the buildings and grounds to their appearance in the early 1930s, the period of the firm's greatest success.

Finding Aid for the Olmsted Firm's Post-1949 Correspondence describes the client and administrative correspondence files that were maintained by the firm from 1949 until the site was acquired by the National Park Service. This document represents many hours of work recording details about the items herein described. The reader, however, should expect a degree of human error and, consequently, should rely on personal observation of the actual items to determine file contents.

Copyright and Privacy Restrictions

The copyright law of the United States (Title 17, United States Code) governs the making of photocopies or other reproductions of copyrighted materials. The Privacy Act of 1974 (5 United States Code 552a) governs the use of materials that document private individuals, groups and corporations.

Under certain conditions specified in the law, libraries and archives are authorized to furnish a reproduction if the document does not infringe the privacy rights of an individual, group or corporation. These specified conditions of authorized use include:

- non-commercial and non-profit study, scholarship, research or teaching
- criticism or commentary
- as a NPS preservation or security copy for research use
- as a research copy for deposit in another institution

If the researcher later uses a copy or reproduction for purposes in excess of "fair use," the researcher is personally liable for copyright, privacy, or publicity infringement and agrees to indemnify the NPS from any legal action as a result of the error. Permission to obtain a photographic, xerographic, digital or other copy of a document does not indicate permission to publish, exhibit, perform, reproduce, sell, distribute or prepare derivative works from the document without permission from the copyright holder and from any private individual, group or corporation shown or otherwise recorded.

Permission to publish, exhibit, perform, reproduce, prepare derivative works from, sell or otherwise distribute the item must be obtained separately in writing from the holder of the original copyright (or if the creator is dead from his/her heirs) as well as from any individual(s), groups or corporations whose name, image, recorded words or private information (e.g. employment information) may be reproduced in the source material. The holder of the original copyright is not necessarily the National Park Service. The National Park Service is not legally liable for copyright, privacy or publicity infringement when materials are wrongfully used after being provided to researchers for "fair use."

This institution reserves the right to refuse to accept a copying order if fulfillment of the order is judged in violation of copyright or federal or state privacy or publicity law. This institution also places restrictions on the use of cameras, photocopiers and scanners in the research room.

Introduction

A hierarchical framework has been created to organize the archival collections at the Frederick Law Olmsted National Historic Site. Within this framework, The Olmsted Firm's Post-1949 Correspondence is a sub-series of the Correspondence series of the Landscape Design Records sub-collection of the Frederick Law Olmsted, Sr., Olmsted Brothers, and Olmsted Associates Records, 1847-1980 collection.

In 1967 and 1971, the Olmsted firm made a substantial donation of its records to the Library of Congress. It was agreed that December 31, 1949 would be the arbitrary cut-off date for documents donated to the library, excluding materials that pertained to clients with which the firm was still working.<sup>2</sup> Therefore, although the Post-1949 Correspondence collection consists primarily of the firm's client and administrative correspondence files dating between 1949 and 1980, many of the files contain significantly older materials if the firm had an earlier relationship with the client. The Library of Congress now holds the bulk of the firm's pre-1950 correspondence in two major collections: the Frederick Law Olmsted Sr. Papers and the Records of the Olmsted Associates.

For the most part, this collection contains original letters from clients and carbon copies of letters sent by the firm. The correspondence frequently details design decisions, sub-contractual agreements, and planting instructions. Besides letters, there are other items of correspondence such as telegrams and post cards. Many files include reports of site visits, cost estimates, and bills. There is a great deal of printed matter in the form of reports, brochures, pamphlets, business cards, clippings, certificates, awards, and maps. Design materials such as plans, blueprints, diazotype prints, and hand-drawn sketches also appear. Photographs and negatives visually document the transformation of a landscape. Large projects usually required lengthy legal documents such as contracts and specifications.<sup>3</sup>

The collection was processed in several stages. In June 1985, Carol Miles completed a preliminary inventory, recording the job number, name, and contents of each folder. Although the firm generally organized its correspondence by job number within each file drawer, the historic order of the collection was somewhat confusing. There were some discrepancies in the arrangement of groups of files and the correspondence was not centralized in one location. According to the processing notes, some misfiling may have been deliberate, such as folders for Job# 673 filed among those for Job# 20 (both contain administrative documents). It also appears that the files were periodically culled of non-current projects because the collection was originally stored in two separate areas: the east side clerical office housed the active files and the lower planting room housed the non-current files. In 1984, the Park Service moved the files stored in the lower planting room to the Men's Lunch Room (the historic name for the office basement). The 1985 inventory documented the exact historic location of the files to allow for future rearrangement of the collection into a less confusing format.<sup>4</sup>

In 1985, a flood in the basement damaged a portion of the collection. The files that were affected were quickly sent to a freeze-drying facility in order to minimize damage and prevent mold growth. Upon their return to the Olmsted Archives, the documents were re-housed in acid-free folders and received appropriate conservation treatment, including surface cleaning, removal of adhesive residue and mending.<sup>5</sup> The freeze-dried documents were not reintegrated into the larger collection at that time.<sup>6</sup>

Lori Bridgers and Rachel Edelstein carried out the second stage of processing in the summer of 1989. Their work included the following tasks: analysis of content and historic arrangement, cleaning, removal of fasteners, and re-housing in archival storage media to provide physical and chemical stability. Documents made from acidic groundwood pulp were removed from the files and replaced with photocopies on “Permalife” paper. Photocopies were also made of the electrofax<sup>7</sup> copies that had been damaged in the flood. Oversize items were unfolded and removed to legal size folders and boxes, leaving a record of the new location in the original file. During this phase, the collection was physically organized into a more accessible format. A cross-referencing system was derived for the collection. When a folder was found to contain documents relating to other projects, additional new folders were created with the job number, name and location in square brackets to indicate that the information had been added by the archives staff. A form inserted in this folder identifies the job number and name of the file where related materials can be found.<sup>8</sup> A database inventory was created that records the original order of the collection; this database was then manipulated and used to aid in the rearrangement of the collection in numerical order by job number.<sup>9</sup>

Anthony Reed and Audrey Jawando completed the latest stage of processing in the spring of 2003. The files, which had been stored in large cartons, were transferred to smaller archival document boxes (5 inches deep). Minor repairs were carried out with Japanese tissue and wheat starch paste. Oversize documents and plans were unfolded and added to the legal size boxes or were removed to map folders that are now stored with the Plans and Drawings Collection. Each of the oversize items (exceeding legal size) was assigned a number, which was written in pencil on the verso of the document. The item number was derived from the job number and the quantity of oversize materials for that particular project. For example, Item# 3604-OS2 is the second oversize item withdrawn from the folder (or folders) for Job# 3604. In each case, a separation sheet describing the oversize item and documenting its new location was inserted into the original folder. The groundwood papers were placed in polyester sleeves, and along with the freeze-dried documents, reintegrated into the main body of the collection. (The damaged electrofax prints, however, were in such poor condition, that it was not deemed prudent to reintegrate them.)<sup>10</sup> Finally, a new finding aid, incorporating much of the information from the earlier stages of processing, was compiled.

The finding aid is divided into four sections:

- Part 1: Collection Description:
  - a scope and content note (or brief synopsis of the collection)
  - an outline showing the organization of the collection
  - descriptions of the various series into which the collection is organized
- Part 2: Historical Note

Series Descriptions

There are two basic types of files in the Post-1949 Correspondence collection: client files and administrative record-keeping files. Each design project or administrative subject was assigned a unique job number by the Olmsted firm, and the files were arranged in numerical order. The vast majority of the documents in this collection consist of the client files, which detail design planning, estimates, and billing for specific projects. Occasional personal correspondence between Olmsted firm partners and biographical material about the clients appear. Major projects with multiple files are split either thematically, by correspondent, or chronologically. Examples of major projects found in this collection are the Kennecott Copper Corp. in Lexington, MA; Syracuse University in Syracuse, NY; Mountain Lake Corp. in Lake Wales, FL; the Patapsco Tunnel in Baltimore, MD; as well as several universities in Mississippi; and housing projects in Massachusetts.

The majority of projects worked on by the firm during this period, however, consist of small private estates. These files rarely exceed one folder. The contents of these folders generally include the following items: reports of initial visits, estimates, occasional contracts (depending on the extent of work to be done), bills for payment to sub-contractors, and personal notes. Clients who hired the Olmsted firm to do design work for multiple jobs include Mrs. Efram Zimbalist Jr., Cary Bok, and Admiral Samuel Eliot Morrison. There are several files that contain correspondence dating from the 1930s from prominent people such as John D. Rockefeller, Percy A. Rockefeller, J. Stillman Rockefeller and Avery Rockefeller.

During processing of the collection, many of the file folders for the more recent jobs (numbered 10,000 and higher) were found to be empty. The contents of these files may have been removed by Artemas Richardson, the last partner in the firm, when he relocated his landscape architecture practice in 1980.<sup>11</sup>

The other series of documents within the collection are the record-keeping files of the firm. "Job# 20" was assigned to administrative related correspondence. These files provide details about how the office was managed and about the firm's employees. The folders contain information such as employee benefits, correspondence between the office and professional organizations, requests to suppliers, and many letters of reference for people who had been in the employ of Olmsted Brothers. These files also provide information about the purchase and maintenance of office equipment, such as the Wagenhorst electric blueprint machine, which was bought in 1905 and was still in operation in the early 1970s. Job# 673 files relate to the physical upkeep of the building and grounds. Since little alteration took place during the period of 1950 to 1980, these files consist mainly of photocopies of earlier documents such as property lines, deeds, etc. Job# 2890 covers all job applications sent to the firm.

Each employee and partner in the firm was also assigned a unique number under which his or her records and related correspondence were filed. Partners in the firm have the most numerous files. For example, this collection contains 29 folders of documents for Edward Clark Whiting (Job# 371). His files contain records pertaining to some of his other professional work, such as his leadership of the Committee on Membership Qualifications for the American Society of Landscape Architects (ASLA). One interesting folder contains material pertaining to Whiting's authorship of the "Frederick Law Olmsted Minute" in Landscape Architecture Quarterly. The file includes copies of papers written by Olmsted Jr. from 1916 to 1943, and a letter from Leon Zach in which he recounts some of his favorite memories of Olmsted. Throughout the box and folder list for this collection, footnotes have been added in order to draw attention to items that may be of particular interest to researchers.<sup>12</sup>

HISTORICAL NOTE

Short History of the Olmsted Firm in Brookline

The history of the Olmsted firm arguably begins in 1857, the year Frederick Law Olmsted, Sr. and Calvert Vaux won the competition to design Central Park in New York City. This project marked the beginning of a partnership that was formalized in 1865 under the name Olmsted, Vaux, and Company. During the 1870s, after his partnership with Vaux ended, Olmsted's work required frequent extended stays in the Boston area. A winter visit to the Brookline home of his good friend H. H. Richardson, eventually prompted him to buy a nearby house. In 1883, the Clark sisters reluctantly sold Olmsted their property at 99 Warren Street under the condition that he build them another house on a portion of the land where they could live rent free.<sup>13</sup> Olmsted called his new home "Fairsted," perhaps after the village in Essex County, England where his ancestors were born.<sup>14</sup> The house in Brookline became both the home and office of Olmsted, and the workplace of the following generations of his firm. Over the years, additions and alterations were made to the structure to make it more suitable for the needs of an expanding business, while maintaining a portion of the building as a residence throughout the long life of the company.

John Charles (JCO) began an apprenticeship with his stepfather in 1875, became a partial partner in 1878, and was made a full partner in 1884. After the addition of Harry Codman in 1889, the name of the firm changed to F. L. Olmsted and Company. After Codman's death and the entrance of Charles Eliot into the firm in 1893, the company was called Olmsted, Olmsted & Eliot. Prior to his graduation from Harvard in 1894, Frederick Law Olmsted, Jr. had worked on landscape architecture jobs under his father's direction. He entered the firm as an assistant after graduating, just a short time before his father effectively retired due to the onset of senile dementia. In 1897, Olmsted Sr. retired, Charles Eliot died, and Olmsted Jr. was made a full partner. In 1898 the company became Olmsted Brothers, the name that it retained for over sixty years.

Olmsted Sr. died in 1903 at the McLean Asylum where he had been committed in 1898. JCO died in 1920, at which point Olmsted Jr. became the senior partner in the firm. The last of the family to be associated with the business, Olmsted Jr. officially retired in 1950, but remained a consultant until his death in 1957. In 1961, the firm changed its name to Olmsted Associates and remained in business at the Brookline office until 1980, when the National Park Service acquired the property and its contents, including the firm's plans and records. During Olmsted Brothers' most successful period, in the 1920s and early 1930s, the firm employed close to 60 men and women. However, by the time the Park Service acquired the site, business had declined appreciably and only supported secretary Mary Tynan and two landscape architects: Artemas Richardson and Joseph Hudak. Richardson subsequently moved his practice, which he called The Olmsted Office, to Fremont, New Hampshire.<sup>15</sup>

The Park Service restored the house and grounds to their circa 1930 appearance and began a long-term conservation project of the plans and drawings collection. These records are available <sup>65</sup> Items of note in this folder include letters written in 1916 to JCO from Downing Vaux and C. Bowyer Vaux. The file also contains a packet labeled “TK Notes/ Early Period/ Downing Material – Sources of Preparation for Later Professional Practice of L. A./ FLO Relations with Downing.” The materials were probably compiled by Theodora Kimball (TK), who in collaboration with FLO, Jr., edited the 1923 volume Forty Years of Landscape Architecture: Professional Papers of Frederick Law Olmsted. Kimball’s correspondence relating to the book is contained in folders seven and nine of this box, as well as in collections at the Library of Congress and elsewhere at Olmsted NHS.
