Methodology

---

The sources used in updating the Cemetery Roster include the following:

- The Roll of Honor
- Original Cemetery Ledgers in Fredericksburg & Spotsylvania NMP collection
- The National Archives Service Records
- The National Archives Pension Records
- State Rosters
- Regimental Histories
- Hospital Records

Park research staff began by going through the FVC (Fredericksburg Battlefield Visitor Center) Roster in order and finding the soldiers in the State Roster. If they were not found there, they next went to the Regimental Histories. If staff still could not find them, they used the Roll of Honor to find what information they could.

The main purpose for using the original cemetery ledgers at Chancellorsville was to match that information up with the information found in the FVC Roster. For the most part, staff found the information to be the same, but when differences did occur, it was noted.

Staff only used the National Archives for a select few soldiers. It is impossible to find out everything on every soldier at the Archives unless you have much more time to spend on this project than staff had. The information found at the Archives usually was about the soldier's family (wife, children, siblings, etc.) and also about what type of injury the soldier suffered that deserved a pension. Henry Abbott (#18 on this roster) is an example of what could be found on a specific soldier in the Archives. His information, like most of the soldiers looked at, came from the Pension Records. Staff did not use Service Records nearly as much as the Pension Records.

As staff went through the existing FVC Roster, the Roll of Honor number was put next to their grave number. This allowed staff to look up the soldier more quickly in order to find out where he was originally buried. Staff also put a check-mark next to the soldier's name to show who had information all ready found.

In 2018, efforts began to better identify the partially unknown soldiers on the roster (i.e. entries with only a first name, last name, or initials). Various resources were used to determine the best probable candidates for these otherwise nebulous graves. When enough evidence was gathered to decipher a soldier's name with a high degree of likelihood, it was noted in the roster. However, the original inscription on the grave has also been left on the roster unaltered, with a notation referencing the presumed identity.
