

Wise About Wildlife

Glacier National Park is home to a lot of different kinds of animals. Many people come to national parks hoping to see wildlife, but it is important to remember that these animals are wild. They need plenty of space and a healthy habitat where they can find their own food. We need to be respectful of the animals and their needs while visiting the park. This is their home. We are the visitors.

Directions:

Circle the highlighted words that best complete the following sentences.

If an animal changes its behavior because of your presence, you are too close / goofy looking / smelly.

In a national park it is never / always / sometimes okay to feed human food to wild animals.

Bears look under rocks in hopes of finding potato chips / insects / peanuts to eat.

When you're hiking in bear country, you should hike quietly / make noise / wear perfume to warn bears that you are entering their space.

At night, park rangers care for the animals by putting them back into their cages / feeding them / leaving them alone.

The place where an animal lives is called its habitat / house / bachelor pad.

The best thing we can do to help wild animals survive is teach them to dance / protect their habitat / take them to dinner.

