National Park Service
U.S. Department of the Interior

MEADOW EXCAVATOR

DID YOU KNOW?

Grizzly bears have super digging powers. In summer, grizzlies are often seen churning up meadows, looking for food like glacier lily bulbs and ground squirrels. Bears are omnivores, which means they eat both plants and meat. You might be surprised to learn that in Glacier National Park, most of a grizzly bear's diet is plants, especially berries.