Dissonant Voices: Reclaiming Lost Narratives in American History

June 16-18, 2009

Buffalo Soldiers at the Presidio
Japanese-American Experience During WWII
American Indian Occupation of Alcatraz
African Americans at Alcatraz Penitentiary
Nike Missile Sites in Marin Headlands

Guest Speakers:

Daisy Martin— Co-Director, National History Education Clearinghouse

Eloy Martinez— Southern Ute Indian Tribe: Participant in the American Indian Occupation of Alcatraz

Co-Sponsor: National Japanese American Historical Society, Inc.

We will offer you a practical approach in using primary sources to provoke students to pose meaningful questions, apply critical thinking skills, and build historic interpretations.

- Join your colleagues to explore:

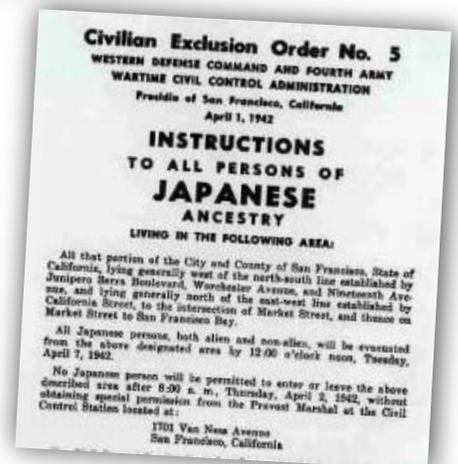

How to use primary sources to support historic inquiry?

How selected sources influence our impressions of historic events?

How does place-based learning enhance student understanding of content standards?

The Golden Gate National Parks make the San Francisco Bay Area one of the most inspiring urban outdoor classrooms. The National Park Service partners with educators, students, and communities to design authentic, inclusive, and relevant programs.

Enjoy this spectacular national park during three days of dynamic exchange about untold American stories.
