

VESTIGES of Lands End

Golden Gate NRA, Park Archives, Interpretation Photo Collection, GOGA 2316

San Francisco Railway Archive, Richard Schlaich Collection

Left: Sutro Depot, 1930s; Right: Interior of Sutro Depot with two streetcars and hot dog stand on right, 1927.

Sutro Depot

This wooden train station, built in 1896 near the entrance to Sutro Baths, served as the terminus for Adolph Sutro's electric streetcar line known as the Sutro Railroad.

A covered pedestrian walkway led visitors from the depot directly to the entrance of the baths. Inside was a hot dog stand, a few benches, and advertising panels.

The United Railroads Company bought the Sutro Railroad in 1900, which then became the #2 Line. Service to Sutro Depot continued until 1949 when a fire destroyed the station. The depot was not rebuilt and service to Sutro Baths was terminated.