

Still Photography

Photography of scenery or historic structures has traditionally been part of a visit to a national park. Photography does not require a permit if it involves only hand-carried equipment (tripod, interchangeable lenses or flash), and does not involve professional crews, product or service advertisement, or use of models, props, or sets.

A still photography permit is required when:

- Product or service advertisement is involved
- Talent/models, props, crews, or sets are involved
- The project has the potential to disrupt other park activities or visitors
- More than just hand-carried equipment is used
- Project requires access to an area normally closed or restricted to general public use
- Access into an area outside of normal public use hours is required
- Project carries with it a potential risk to park resources
- Activity raises safety concerns that can be mitigated through issuance of a permit with restrictions or conditions
