On Tuesday, join Park Archeologist Summer Roper who will share her knowledge about an area of salt (pa'akai) production sites in the park and their history. On Saturday, join her on an expedition to see these extensive remnants that are protected along the rugged park coastline. Learn how the residents of this area used a unique method to extract pa'akai — a crucial resource to sustaining life in this dense lava landscape.

Program co-sponsored by Friends of Hawai'i Volcanoes National Park. For information, call (808) 985-6011. Your donation helps support park programs. Park entrance fees apply.
