Born and raised on the island of O'ahu, Rick LaMontagne relocated to Hawai'i Island in 2008 and currently resides in the Volcano area. He has been a volunteer at Hawai'i Volcanoes National Park for seven years in the Division of Interpretation and works at the Kīlauea Visitor Center. Rick has always had a deep interest in many cultures, including "things Hawaiian". Calling himself "an amateur crafter", Rick has for many years replicated just a few of the many implements that have been used by generations of Hawai'i's people.

'Ike Hana No'eau is a series of Hawaiian cultural programs sponsored by Hawai'i Volcanoes National Park.
