What JFK Means to Me

Creighton Banitt

John Fitzgerald Kennedy was a great leader. JFK was born on May 29, 1917 on Beals Street in Brookline, Massachusetts. JFK was also called Jack by his family and friends. He was from a wealthy family. He was the 35th president of the United States of America. He was also the youngest man and the first Catholic to be president. I think that JFK was an important leader. He was brave, responsible and a determined person. He made the world a great and better place.

JFK made the world a great and better place because he cared alot about his people. When their PT-109 got sliced in half by a Japanese Destroyer, he towed a burned crewmate four miles in the sea to an island. He swallowed so much sea water, he vomited for hours. When he was president, he managed the Cuba Missile Crisis safely. JFK also helped stop segregation between the white and African Americans. He was part of the civil rights Act. He started the Peace Corps to help the poor. It did a lot of work for the whole world.

I chose to write about this part of JFK's life because I think he did a lot of work for his country and also the whole world. He was a strong, courageous, and a charming person. I want to be a careful and energetic person like Mr. John F. Kennedy never gave up and was always curious about his surroundings. Like he said, "Ask not what your country can do for you but what you can do for your country."
