What J.F.K. Means to Me

Zadie Schwab-Jacobson

May 18, 2016

J.F.K. Was a creative and helpful leader. J.F.K. taught people about the importance of helping others. He wanted others to care for everyone, not just themselves. J.F.K. teaches us the importance of taking care of everyone all over the world.

The Peace Corps was an Organazation invented by John F. Kennedy that still goes on today. People who are in the Peace Corps go to places all over the world to help people that need help. Some of the thingss people that are from the Peare Corps do are: getting medicine for sick, building houses for people that do not have houses and helping people learn things that they can't learn where they live or, they can't go to school because they don't have enough money. Also people might help others on their farm or in their gardens.

A way that J.F.K and I are alike is that we both think it's important for everyone to be helpful and to be cared about. J.F.K. has taught me to care for everyone not just people you know as long as you think you have seen them before and seem safe to be near. We need the Peace Corps today to help everyone around the world and if it was not, then who would help.

Ways I have been helpful are: When my brother and sister have a fight I try to help end it. I help my parents organize my room (it's the messiest place in our house) Things I learned from J.F.K. are: He made sure everyone was helped and treated in the same way. John hoped he could get everyone to help others.