

Emergent vegetation: plants that are rooted in mud beneath water, but grow tall enough to stick out above water or have leaves that float on the water under normal conditions. Examples would be cattail and waterlilies.