

Pedestrians enjoy a vehicle free park highway

Join Lassen Volcanic National Park during a vehicle free weekend Friday, May 16 through Sunday, May 18. Come walk, hike, bike, or run the Lassen National Park Highway before it opens to through traffic for the season.

Safety

Share the road and maintain a safe distance between walkers and cyclists. The park highway is narrow and winding; sharp turns may prevent unobstructed views of what lies ahead on the road. Be prepared for possible ice in shaded areas.

Bicycle helmets are strongly encouraged. Riders may face hazards including high speeds on steep downhill sections, rocks, wildlife, and other road hazards. The park will complete a rock sweep of the road daily by 9 am. Cyclists must adhere to rules that apply to automobile traffic, including posted speed limits.

Dogs must be leashed (5 foot or less) and are only permitted on the road. Dogs are not permitted on any park trails or on the snow.

Cell phone service is limited in the park. AT&T and Verizon provide the best coverage, however it is spotty and should not be relied upon for emergencies. There is an emergency phone located at Kohm Yah-mah-nee Visitor Center and Loomis Museum. Additionally, rangers will be patrolling the road intermittently during the day.

Preparedness

Come prepared for cool weather especially in the early morning and late evening. Lassen is a high elevation park ranging from 5,650 to 10,457 feet and weather can change quickly. Check the weather forecast before your visit and come prepared for the conditions.

Wear layers and bring sunscreen, sunglasses, and a hat. Even on overcast days, sun exposure is greater at higher elevations.

Is your bike ready to ride? Check that your tires have sufficient air, brakes are working, chain runs smoothly, and carry tools and supplies that are appropriate for your ride.

Are you prepared to walk or bike? Bring sufficient snacks, water, and a first aid kit. Do not forget your camera to photograph the spectacular views and all the fun you will have.
