PREFACE

This document, the Finding Aid for the Alexander Wadsworth Longfellow Jr. (1854-1934) Papers, 1864-1979 (bulk dates 1872-1934) describes the personal papers related to this prominent New England architect. This collection was present in the Longfellow House before the National Park Service assumed control in 1972. Staff from the Northeast Museum Services Center (NMSC) catalogued the papers in August and September 2005 and added previously unidentified or misidentified items in summer and fall 2006. The NMSC staff thanked staff at the Longfellow House-Washington's Headquarters National Historic Site,¹ especially Archives Specialist Anita Israel, for their assistance in this project. Fiscal year 2005 and 2006 Backlog Cataloging moneys funded these projects.

RESTRICTIONS

The copyright law of the United States (Title 17, United States Code) governs the making of photocopies or other reproductions of copyrighted materials. The Privacy Act of 1974 (5 United States Code 552a) governs the use of materials that document private individuals, groups and corporations.

Under certain conditions specified in the law, libraries and archives are authorized to furnish a reproduction if the document does not infringe the privacy rights of an individual, group or corporation. These specified conditions of authorized use include:

- non-commercial and non-profit study, scholarship, research or teaching
- criticism or commentary
- as a NPS preservation or security copy for research use
- as a research copy for deposit in another institution

If the researcher later uses a copy or reproduction for purposes in excess of "fair use," the researcher is personally liable for copyright, privacy, or publicity infringement and agrees to indemnify the NPS from any legal action as a result of the error. Permission to obtain a photographic, xerographic, digital or other copy of a document does not indicate permission to publish, exhibit, perform, reproduce, sell, distribute or prepare derivative works from the document without permission from the copyright holder and from any private individual, group or corporation shown or otherwise recorded.

Permission to publish, exhibit, perform, reproduce, prepare derivative works from, sell or otherwise distribute the item must be obtained separately in writing from the holder of the original copyright (or if the creator is dead from his/her heirs) as well as from any individual(s), groups or corporations whose name, image, recorded words or private information (e.g. employment information) may be reproduced in the source material. The holder of the original copyright is not necessarily the National Park Service. The National Park Service is not legally liable for copyright, privacy or publicity infringement when materials are wrongfully used after being provided to researchers for "fair use."

This institution reserves the right to refuse to accept a copying order if fulfillment of the order is judged in violation of copyright or federal or state privacy or publicity law. This institution also places restrictions on the use of cameras, photocopiers and scanners in the research room.

INTRODUCTION

The Alexander Wadsworth Longfellow Jr. (1854-1934) Papers are comprised of materials mostly relating to the personal life of this nephew of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, a highly successful architect in his own right. Correspondence, diaries, and printed ephemera describe his formative years as a Harvard undergraduate and young architect. The sailing logs of his mature years express his lifelong love of yachting and the coast of Maine. Only one full set of project files remains from his long architectural career.

These papers belong to the accession LONG-1, the materials present in the house when the National Park Service took possession of the Longfellow House-Washington's Headquarters National Historic Site (LONG) in 1972. Annotations indicate that his sister Mary King Longfellow (MKL) and possibly his other sister, Lucia Wadsworth Longfellow Barrett (LWLB), gave a portion of the papers to Henry Wadsworth Longfellow Dana, the family historian and custodian of the Longfellow House archives, after Alexander's death in 1934. They also gave their family's collective papers to Dana (HWLD) for the House's archives. Dana probably took out from the family papers Alexander's letters to his mother and placed them in Alexander's own papers.

As with the other archival collections, LONG staff in the 1970s and 1980s found these papers throughout the house, rehoused them, and placed them in the archives. The late Margaret Henderson Floyd and her research assistants mined the diaries and other personal materials for information relating to Longfellow's architectural commissions in preparation for Floyd's definitive Architecture After Richardson: Regionalism Before Modernism – Longfellow, Alden, and Harlow in Boston and Pittsburgh published in 1994. LONG Archives Specialist Anita Israel and former Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities/ National Park Service (NPS) Archivist Jennifer Lyons identified materials belonging to the Alexander Wadsworth Longfellow Jr. (1854-1934) Papers in 2001. NPS Archivist Margaret Welch catalogued these papers at the NMSC facilities at the Charlestown Navy Yard from August to September 2005 as part of the multi-year project cataloguing unprocessed materials in the LONG archives. The project was carried out under the guidance of David Vecchioli, Regional Archivist, NMSC. During this project the NMSC was administered by Sara Wolf, Director and Giles Parker, Deputy Director.

The papers were arranged into series and rehoused into acid-free folders and archival boxes. All paper clips, staples, and other metal fasteners were removed, and particularly acidic materials such as newsprint clippings and dried flora were separated from other materials with a separation sheet to cross-reference their original location. Separation sheets were likewise created for oversize and photographic materials. In previous editions of the finding aid, oversize materials, newsprint materials, and oversize newsprint materials were treated as separate series (XII-XIV). In this edition of the finding aid, oversize and newsprint material is listed under the series with which it is intellectually associated.

SERIES DESCRIPTIONS

Throughout the collection, items have been removed as dictated by form or content. Separation sheets are inserted in the location from which an item was removed, and copies of the separation sheets are stored with the removed item itself.

Series I. Diaries and Journals

No diaries from Longfellow's childhood remain, but he was diligent in entering his activities in his teenage years. He recorded his frequent visits to Craigie House, his other social engagements, and his sometimes indifferent academic achievements during his years at Harvard.² He noted his time spent in the "atelier" and the buildings he studied during his Paris education and travels in Europe.

Brief references are made to his offices at the architects Cabot & Chandler and at H.H. Richardson. The incomplete diaries of 1886 and 1887 mention his work at Longfellow & Harlow.

He manifested his life-long passion for sailing off Maine's coast through sketches of boats and scenery matched with his enthusiastic diary entries. Many of the logs of the trips on the Meredith, Alice, and the two crafts named Wyvern, contain not only weather and location information but Longfellow's commentary on the good times he and his companions were sharing. His shipmates also wrote entries complimenting their "Skipper" on his hospitality.³

Arranged chronologically.

Series II. Correspondence

The bulk of extant correspondence is between Longfellow and his mother, Elizabeth Clapp Porter Longfellow (ECPL). She was the family member to whom he primarily wrote from his days at Harvard to his early years as a successful architect. Longfellow on a weekly basis wrote about his daily routines so architectural historian Margaret Henderson Floyd and her research associates were able to search the letters for important information on his projects for Cabot & Chandler, H.H. Richardson, and Longfellow, Alden & Harlow. Unfortunately few letters from his clients or fellow architects remain.⁴

Almost one-half of the correspondence relates to the time Longfellow studied in Paris from April 1879 to Fall 1881. He shared with his mother the challenges of speaking French and passing Ecole des Beaux Arts examinations and the joys of sketching buildings throughout France. His mother in turn wrote about the weekly activities of his family including his sisters Mary ("Mamie"), Elizabeth Porter Longfellow Dodge ("Bessie"), and Lucia Longfellow Barrett and his brother Richard.

⁴ One exception is a letter from Radcliffe College's Elizabeth Cary Agassiz praising his Bertram Hall, 23 January 1902.

Because he visited his Uncle Henry and his cousins at Craigie frequently when he lived in Cambridge and later in Boston, his letters sometimes relate that family's social life. He related details of the 1896 Craigie House costume ball at which the Dana children dressed as George and Martha Washington, Edmund Randolph, and the Pepperell children whose portrait hung in the Craigie parlor.⁵ One letter to his mother candidly implied he did not enjoy guests at all gatherings: "The Craigie girls reception was very pleasant as such things must be in that house - - such a collection of 'chumps' as they gather in on occasions always saddens me a little."⁶ He dwelt at length on the funeral of his cousin and friend Charles Appleton Longfellow held in the parlor of the Craigie on 15 April 1893.⁷

The outgoing correspondence is arranged chronologically. The incoming correspondence is arranged alphabetically by correspondents' surnames.

Series III. Personal Materials

This series includes newsclippings, notes, and prints related to ships and yachts in which Longfellow was interested all his life. Obituaries and memorials from organizations such as the Boston Society of Arts and Crafts and the Boston Museum of Fine Arts give important biographical information.

Arranged chronologically.

Series IV. Images

Several drawings and maps made by Longfellow are here.⁸

*Series V. Academic Life*⁹

Longfellow assembled scrapbooks related to his undergraduate days at Harvard. Most of the printed ephemera is related to his active socializing. See also the scrapbook of his student days in France in the Addendum.

Series VI. Professional Life

The bulk of files related to the project of Longfellow and his partners has evidently been destroyed. The project files for the Dr. George S. Derby house in Falmouth, Maine are the most complete evidence of how Longfellow and his office conceived and executed a commission.

Longfellow or possibly his family members compiled a scrapbook containing newspaper clippings and magazine articles about Longfellow's commissions.

Arranged chronologically.

Series VII. Financial Records

A few accounts found in letters and diaries are included.

Arranged chronologically.

Series VIII. Estate Documents

An inventory, gift acknowledgements, and photostats of autographed manuscripts indicate the range of Longfellow's collecting interests.

Arranged chronologically.

Series IX. Collected Materials

Scrapbooks and newspaper clippings indicate Longfellow's interest in current events. Most clippings are from the year 1917; possibly Longfellow and others kept these "general scraps" for their discussion of World War I events.

Arranged chronologically.

*Series X. Reference Materials*¹⁰

Friends and Henry Wadsworth Longfellow Dana wrote brief biographical sketches of Longfellow.

BIOGRAPHY

Alexander Wadsworth Longfellow, Jr. was born to Elizabeth Clapp Porter Longfellow and Alexander Wadsworth Longfellow, a brother of the poet Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, on 18 August 1854 at the family's farm, "Highfield," in Westbrook, Maine. Like his father and older sister Mary King ("Mamie"), he enjoyed drawing from an early age and recorded that he was "painting" at age fourteen. In his teens, Alexander (known as "Wad" or "Waddy" throughout his life) sailed up and down the Maine coast with his father who was mapping the coastline for the U.S. Coast Survey.

He entered Harvard in 1872 where he excelled mostly in the Fine Arts and Natural History. His roommate was a childhood friend from Portland, Thomas Talbot. A frequent visitor at "Craigie House," the home of his uncle Henry on nearby Brattle Street, Longfellow attended many Cambridge and Boston social events and dances, so many in fact, that it is not surprising his grades were not superior.

He entered the two-year architectural program at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. His artistic talent and the career of his cousin, William Pitt Preble Longfellow who both practiced and taught architecture, may have directed him to this profession. His teacher at the the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Charles Ware, and others spoke to him of the advantages of studying in Europe, and his cousin, Alice Mary Longfellow, offered to pay for this education. Longfellow decided to work for a year in the office of Cabot & Chandler before heading to Paris in April 1879.

Longfellow's European education began under challenging circumstances as he failed his first entrance exams at the Ecole des Beaux Arts and had to become fluent in speaking and writing in French.¹¹ He entered the atelier of the architect Emile Vaudremer where he undertook study projects such as a house or small museum in a park and drew "en charrette," in the intense drawing sessions. Despite the hard work, the surrounding art and architecture sustained his interest: Paris's "Notre Dame" gave him "sensations beyond description" and he enjoyed a visit to "the young man" John Singer Sargent in his studio.¹² "The most picturesque style" of medieval French architecture inspired him to sketch continually in his travels through the countryside.¹³ The architecture of Italy initially did not please him, but he succumbed to Venice's Saint Mark's Piazza in the moonlight and indeed returned to Italy twice.¹⁴ After two years, he was "pretty well satisfied with what I have done here" and returned to the United States.

His European training (and first-hand knowledge of the French Romanesque style) may have persuaded the premier interpreter of "American Romanesque," Henry Hobson Richardson of Brookline, Massachusetts, to hire him. Longfellow supervised other assistants on projects but was eager to design his own projects. He started his own firm with a Massachusetts Institute of Technology classmate, Alfred Harlow, in 1886. Another Richardson assistant, Frank Alden, joined the firm in 1887. They received major commissions in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania including millionaires' mansions, the Dusquesne Club, and the Carnegie Institute and Library. Longfellow, inspired by the colonial details of the Craigie House two doors away on Brattle Street, designed a Colonial Revival house for his cousin Anne Allegra Longfellow Thorp in 1889. Longfellow stayed in Boston, and Alden and Harlow remained active in Pittsburgh when the firm split in 1896. Longfellow's younger brother, Richard King Longfellow (1864-1914), whom he had advised throughout his career, worked with Alexander.

His family connections and many friends aided Longfellow in his career. Longfellow's close relationship with his cousin Alice probably aided in him receiving commissions from some of her friends and from Radcliffe College which she supported. He also designed the Semitic Museum, the Phillip Brooks House, and other Harvard University buildings. His longtime friendship with the wealthy artist, J. Templeton Coolidge, led to his designing large summer homes for Coolidge and his family around Little Harbor, New Hampshire. For his numerous commissions for major summer homes on the Maine coast, Longfellow developed a "shingle style" look with long, low rooflines fitting into the firred coastlines. His receiving the prestigious commission from the Boston Elevated Railroads to build railway stations was a career highlight; in tribute to his uncle, he named the winning design "Excelsior."

From his days in Paris enjoying the arts salons, Longfellow appreciated the fine arts and the decorative arts. He was a trustee of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts for thirty years, a member of the Copley Society, president of the Marine Museum at Boston Old State House, and a member of the Boston Art Commission. He, who early on admired John LaFarge's glasswork, was a founding member of the Society of Arts and Crafts in Boston and a director of the Dedham Pottery.¹⁵

Like his father and sisters, Longfellow was interested in genealogy, particularly as his practice lessened in the 1910s and 1920s, and he enjoyed reading about colonial history. Like his father, he clipped articles of interest to him from many newspapers. He collected autographs of famous Americans, marine paintings and photographs, and "curiosities" such as clay heads "from the Valley of Mexico."¹⁶ He supported the Republican Party and chaired a Republican Citizens Committee.¹⁷

Longfellow enjoyed sailing since he was a teen. His older cousin Charles Appleton Longfellow (1844-1893), himself an avid yachtsman, gave Alexander his first vessel, a modest "lapstreak boat some twenty feet long" named the "Wyvern" in which the latter cruised on the Maine coast. As an adult, he sailed on his cousin's yacht, the "Alga," and on Charles Weld's "Gitana." He and his brother Richard later owned another "Wyvern," a forty-two Burgess cutter. In this boat,

Longfellow led annual cruises in August and September, accompanied by good friends and his steward Oscar. Good food and drink were served, with one guest writing in a thank-you note that “toil and temperance” were best in the long run “but there is profound refreshment in deviation.”¹⁸

Longfellow’s love of the sea and the Maine coast in particular colored his social life. He was a member of the artistic “Tavern” Club and social clubs like the Somerset. However, his favorite club probably was Boston’s India Wharf Rats Club in which he, the “Skipper” wearing an old top hat, sat at the head of the table and called the group to order to sing the club song. He loved to interpret the “native” dialect and ways of the Down East people he had met throughout his life and developed stories about the characters “Uncle Pinkham, Simeon Taylor, and Levi Bliffin.” Club mates thought so highly of these stories that “a dozen or more of these stories have been taken down on the phonograph by some of our members.”¹⁹

Longfellow never married and remained close to his family in Portland, Maine. He suffered financial misfortune towards the end of his life and thanked his sisters, Mamie and Lucia Wadsworth Longfellow Barrett, for their support in the matter: “Our love for one another helps more than I can tell.”²⁰ He visited them on a weekly basis and on one of these trips he died on February 16, 1934.
