PREFACE

This document, the third edition of Finding Aid for Washington Allston (1779-1843) Materials, 1868-1966 (bulk dates 1939-1949) -- as compiled by H.W.L. Dana (1881-1950), describes research papers collected by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow Dana, a grandson of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow. This edition reflects the addition of materials in 2007. A draft of this finding aid was issued in June 1997 and was the result of two cataloging projects carried out by the Northeast Museum Services Center during 1994 and in 1997; another edition was issued in 1999. Both editions are obsolete with the release of the current document.

The catalogers in all phases of the project expressed their gratitude towards staff at Longfellow National Historic Site for their assistance in carrying out this work, in particular, Site Manager Jim Shea and former Museum Specialist Michele Clark.

This document represents many hours of work recording details about the items herein described. The reader should expect a reasonable degree of human error and consequently rely on personal observation of the actual items.

INTRODUCTION

This finding aid describes the Washington Allston (1779-1843) Materials, 1798-1966 (bulk dates 1939-1949) -- as compiled by H.W.L. Dana (1881-1950). The collection consists of various items collected by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow Dana (whose maternal grandfather was Henry Wadsworth Longfellow) in the course of researching the life and works of Washington Allston, considered to be America's first romantic artist. There also are a few notes and correspondence of H.W.L. Dana's father, Richard Henry Dana III, and of his aunt, Elizabeth Ellery Dana, as well as a small amount of material added after H.W.L. Dana's death. The Washington Allston materials, including both H.W.L. Dana's research as well as Allston's library, were accessioned into the Longfellow National Historic Site museum collection as part of accession LONG-1 when the Longfellow House Trust, which was formed in 1913, donated the Longfellow house and its contents to the National Park Service in 1973.

Washington Allston's second wife, Martha Remington Dana Allston, was the sister of Richard Henry Dana, Sr. (H.W.L. Dana's paternal great-grandfather). Upon Washington Allston's death, Mrs. Dana's nephew, Richard Henry Dana, Jr., became trustee of the Washington Allston Trust, a fund which had arisen from shares purchased by Allston's friends to support him during his twenty-six-year work on his masterpiece Belshazzar's Feast which remained unfinished at the time of his death. Trusteeship passed to Richard Henry Dana, Jr.'s son, Richard Henry Dana III. H.W.L. Dana -- who was a lifetime resident of the Craigie house, the home of his maternal grandparents Henry and Fanny Longfellow -- became trustee upon the death of his father, Richard Henry Dana III. H.W.L. Dana was charged with the care, conservation, and storage of Allston's unsold works which became the property of the trust. He was also responsible for purchasing other works which came up for sale. Upon H.W.L. Dana's death in 1950, a portion of his papers, including the Washington Allston materials, became the property of the Longfellow House Trust, who later donated them to the National Park Service in 1973, as noted above.

In the fall of 1994, Ann Marie Dubé, Anita Israel, and John J. Prowse of the Collections Accountability Program (now the Northeast Museum Services Center) undertook a project to rehouse and catalog the Washington Allston materials. A survey of the papers revealed that they dealt with four subject categories: biographical material about Washington Allston; information on his works; papers dealing with his friends; and materials resulting from H.W.L. Dana's role as trustee of the Washington Allston Trust. The catalogers grouped the materials under these four headings but maintained original order within each subject group. The catalogers found that the collection also contained numerous loose-leaf binders. The catalogers removed the material from the binders and grouped the loose papers under the following subject headings (matching those outlined above): biographical material about Washington Allston; information on his works; and papers dealing with his friends. The catalogers found that the collection contained a few index cards; these were left in original order. Photographs and negatives found throughout the collection, as well as oversize materials, were removed by the catalogers to separate storage. The collection was cataloged into the Automated National Catalog System as LONG 20258, a catalog card was printed, and a box and folder list was drafted. In addition, the collection of lantern slides was cataloged separately from the main collection, with a catalog record created for each slide. The same was done for the books, magazines, and catalogs in Allston's library.

In the spring of 1997, Jonathan Bohan (museum technician with the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities) drafted a finding aid, which was distributed in June 1997. Diane Godwin, archivist with the Northeast Museum Services Center, revised the finding aid and distributed it in final in July 1999. In 2007 Margaret Welch, another archivist with the Northeast Museum Services Center, incorporated materials identified after the first phases and issued the third edition of the finding aid.

The finding aid is divided into five sections:

Description: The Washington Allston (1779-1843) Materials, 1798-1966 (bulk dates 1939-1949) -- as compiled by H.W.L. Dana (1881-1950) -- consist of the research notes, manuscripts, correspondence, index cards, photostats, photographs, books, lantern slides and other material collected by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow Dana in the course of researching Washington Allston, considered to be America's first romantic artist. The collection also includes books from Washington Allston's own library, as well as a small number of items which were added after the death of Dana in 1950. H.W.L. Dana used this research material for numerous articles and lectures on Washington Allston which he planned to expand into a complete biography, entitled Washington Allston: Romantic Poet and Author, but this work was never finished. Dana also collaborated with Edgar Preston Richardson of the Detroit Institute of Arts on a catalogue raisonné of Allston's works and provided information for several Allston exhibits.

The collection is organized into ten series: I. Biography; II. Works; III. Friends; IV. Trust; V. Binders re: biography, works, and friends; VI. Index Cards; VII. Photographs and Negatives; VIII. Lantern Slides; IX. Oversize Materials; and X. Books, Magazines, and Catalogs.

Short biographies of Washington Allston and of H.W.L. Dana are provided in this finding aid.

SERIES DESCRIPTIONS

Series I. Biography (part of LONG 20258)

This series consists of H.W.L. Dana's research material and writings on the life of Washington Allston, including notes, lists, genealogies, correspondence, photographs, newspaper clippings and articles, brochures, catalogs and photostats. Within the series, all materials are arranged in the order in which they were found, with original folder titles retained.

Series II. Works (part of LONG 20258)

The materials in this series were generated by H.W.L. Dana's efforts to locate all extant works of Washington Allston and to obtain a photograph of each one. There are additional materials which resulted from his efforts to document all known works - including those lost or destroyed - for inclusion in a catalogue raisonné. This series contains correspondence, publications, photographs, and photostats of Allston's correspondence, arranged roughly by subject.

Series III. Friends (LONG 20258)

Allston's closest friends included some very well-known people, such as Samuel Taylor Coleridge, Washington Irving, and John Vanderlyn. This series contains biographical materials, correspondence, and correspondence copies, arranged roughly alphabetically.

Series IV. Trust (part of LONG 20258)

This series consists primarily of H.W.L. Dana's correspondence to various museums in his efforts to find a satisfactory repository for the Allston paintings owned by the Washington Allston Trust, a fund which had arisen from shares purchased by Allston's friends to support him during his twenty-six-year work on his masterpiece Belshazzar's Feast. There is also some correspondence concerning the purchase of Allston works that were for sale, as well as dealing with the conservation of some paintings.

Series V. Binders re: A. Biography, B. Works, and C. Friends (part of LONG 20258)

There are three sets of loose leaf binders, dealing with three subjects (matching those outlined above): biography, works, and friends. The binders contain H.W.L. Dana's research notes, lists, and indices on these subjects, as well as drafts for the various chapters of his Allston biography. The papers which were contained in the binders have been transferred to folders, with the original titles retained.

Series VI. Index Cards (part of LONG 20258)
This series is comprised primarily of index cards on which are citations for books and articles used by H.W.L. Dana in his research. Also included are several cards with quotes, postcards relating to Dana research, and a page torn from an advertisement for the Carnegie Book Shop in New York City.

Series VII. Photographs and Negatives (part of LONG 20258)

Photographs and negatives found throughout the collection described above were removed to separate storage (boxes 13-15). The photographs and negatives are arranged in the order of the collection. Box 16 contains glass plate negatives separated from the main collection. Box 17 contains negatives of Allston works.

Series VIII. Lantern Slides (cataloged as LONG 20190-20255)

This series is comprised of a wooden box containing sixty-five lantern slides, which were apparently made by H.W.L. Dana in 1943 for a lecture on Washington Allston commemorating the 100th anniversary of Allston's death. The slides and box were cataloged individually as LONG 20190-20255 and therefore are not included in the item count for LONG 20258.

Series IX. Oversize Materials (part of LONG 20258)

Items in this series are grouped together because of their common size. This series is divided into two sub-series: A. Oversize Materials removed from the Main Collection (from Series I. Biography and Series II. Works) and B. Oversize Materials found Together (related to Series I. Biography, Series II. Works, and Series III. Friends).

Series X. Books, Magazines, and Catalogs (cataloged as LONG 14355-14368, 14493-14496, 14498-14502, 14504-14521, 14524-14536, 14544 and 14549-14554)

The books, magazines, and catalogs are organized into two sub-series. The first sub-series, A. Washington Allston's Library, contains items cataloged as LONG 14420 and 14442-14492. The second sub-series, B. H.W.L. Dana's Library re: Washington Allston, contains items cataloged as LONG 14355-14368, 14493-14496, 14498-14502, 14504-14521, 14524-14536, 14544, and 14549-14554. The items in this series are not included in the item count for LONG 20258.
PART 2:

BIOGRAPHICAL DATA
Washington Allston (1779-1843)\textsuperscript{5}

Washington Allston, born 5 November 1779 in South Carolina, was considered America's first romantic artist. Painting tradition in America during the eighteenth century was based on portrait painting, both large oils and miniatures. Allston became the first American painter not dependent on portraiture for his livelihood, painting instead romantic landscapes and scenes based on literature. He was noted for his dramatic subject matter, use of light, and atmospheric color.

The son of William A. Allston, a wealthy plantation owner who had served in the Revolutionary War, Washington Allston was named for George Washington. In 1781 his father died, and four years later his mother, Rachel Moore, married Dr. Henry Collins Flagg of Newport, Rhode Island. Allston's early education took place in Charleston, but at the age of eight he was sent to Newport to study with Robert Rogers in preparation for Harvard College. He began to develop his artistic interests and received his earliest art instruction at that time. He became friendly with some artists, but perhaps more importantly, he formed a friendship with William Ellery Channing, the future Unitarian minister, and Channing's sister Ann.

Allston entered Harvard College in 1796, a year after Channing began his studies there, and graduated in 1800. While at Harvard, Allston continued the classical education he had begun under Rogers' tutelage, and this was reflected in the subject matter of his paintings. He also formed abiding friendships with people who would be significant to his life and career, such as Edmund Trowbridge Dana and Leonard Jarvis. He continued drawing and painting while in college, and by the time he graduated had determined to pursue an artistic career.

Following graduation from Harvard, and after a visit to South Carolina to see his ailing stepfather (who died early in 1801), Allston set off for Europe to study art. He arrived in London with his friends, Edmund Trowbridge Dana and miniaturist Edward Malbone, and commenced study at the Royal Academy under Benjamin West. While in London, Allston became friendly with John Vanderlyn and in 1803 travelled with him to Paris via Holland. In Paris they both exhibited paintings in the 1804 Salon, becoming the earliest Americans to do so. After a ten-month stay in Paris, Allston went to Italy via Switzerland, arriving in Rome in November 1804. He soon formed lasting friendships with Washington Irving and with Samuel Taylor Coleridge, who arrived in Rome in December 1805. Fearing the invasion of Napoleon's army, Coleridge hastily left Italy in 1806 and in March 1808 Allston sailed for home, fearing America would soon be involved in the Napoleonic wars.

On his return to America, Allston established himself as a professional painter in Boston, and on 19 June 1809 married his childhood friend, Ann Channing, after an eleven-year courtship. He became a good friend and close colleague of Gilbert Stuart, and during this period Allston produced his greatest number of portraits, reflecting the continuing theme of artistic preference in America.

In 1811 Washington Allston returned to London with his wife and his young student, Samuel F.B. Morse. He renewed his close friendship with Samuel Coleridge and through him met William Wordsworth, Robert Southey, and art patron Sir George Beaumont. He also renewed his relationship with his old teacher and mentor Benjamin West. These eight years that he spent in England, and primarily in London, were the period of his greatest success in the creation of his major historical paintings, in his patronage by English art connoisseurs, and in his opportunity for self-expression. However, he also endured periods of ill health and great financial set-backs. Early in 1815 his wife fell ill and died shortly thereafter, which left Allston severely depressed and unable to paint. The support of his friends, especially Coleridge, helped him through this severe trial, which was compounded several months later by the departure of Morse for America.

By the end of 1815, however, Allston reemerged into London society, visiting and dining with American minister John Quincy Adams, and continuing with his painting. In September 1817 Allston again travelled to Paris with his friends and colleagues William Collins and Charles Leslie. They spent six weeks studying paintings at the Louvre and admiring contemporary French painting. This visit to Paris seemed to infuse Allston with renewed creative energy, for on his return to London he started several major paintings. It was during this period that he started work on his great canvas Belshazzar's Feast.

Although he was at the height of his career in England, in 1818 Washington Allston decided to return to the United States against the advice of his friends. He was voted in as an associate of the Royal Academy after his return to America, and in Boston he was well patronized, his reputation having preceded him. He continued to suffer severe economic restrictions, however, partly because the prices he received were comparatively low (as most of the pictures were relatively small) and because many of his paintings remained unfinished. After two years in America, Allston finally returned to work on Belshazzar's Feast. He invited his friend Gilbert Stuart to inspect and criticize the picture, which proved disastrous. Stuart made suggestions concerning the perspective of the painting which caused Allston to rework the entire composition. In October 1821 he reported the picture two-thirds finished, but each new effort seemed to engender more changes. In February of 1823 he said he hoped to finish it by May, and indeed, it was reported almost finished by Chester Harding who saw it in 1823.

The other hindrance to the completion of Belshazzar's Feast was the result of good will. In order to free Allston from pecuniary pressures and allow him the time to finish his masterpiece, twelve wealthy friends and patrons subscribed a sum of $10,000 to be used for the purchase of the finished painting. The money was entrusted to a group of three trustees, so Allston could draw on the funds when needed. The painting was so close to completion in 1827 that a frame was ordered for it, but he did not finish it then. Ostensibly, one of Allston's problems in completing the work was having a studio large enough to view it from a great enough distance to properly correct the perspective. When given the use of a large studio, he did not unroll the canvas for many months, and when he resumed work on it, reportedly blotted out four years' work. At the end of the decade he lost the use of the large studio, so returned again to a variety of themes. In 1830 Washington Allston finally married Martha Remington Dana after a nine-year engagement. Miss Dana was the sister of Allston's long-time friends Edmund Trowbridge Dana and Richard Henry Dana, Sr. (Henry Wadsworth Longfellow Dana's paternal great-grandfather), and a cousin of Allston's first wife Ann Channing. The couple moved into a house in Cambridgeport, and a year later a separate studio building was completed. Although the studio was large enough to accommodate paintings of tremendous size, Belshazzar remained rolled up for eight more years. During this time Allston resumed work on the more immediately remunerative smaller pictures and planned larger compositions which were never completed. He received many visitors at his house and studio, including Thomas Sully, Washington Irving, John J. Audubon, Asher Durand, Thomas Cole, and Charles Dickens.

In 1836, Allston was offered a commission to paint two of the panels of the Capitol rotunda. His old friends, Leonard Jarvis and John Quincy Adams were members of the Joint Congressional Committee appointed to contract with artists for this purpose, but Allston declined this offer, pleading his commitment to finish Belshazzar and other commissions. He pressed that one of the panels be awarded to Morse, but the committee did not accept his suggestion.

In 1839, Belshazzar was unrolled again, and Allston continued to work on it until his death, abandoning most other works. In June of 1843 he started complaining of pains on his left side and on the evening of 9 July he died, leaving his masterpiece unfinished after twenty-six years. His funeral was held the next evening, with his body being carried to the Cambridge Burying Ground in a torchlight parade by Harvard students and laid in the Dana tomb.

Washington Allston was also an author, having published a book of poetry, The Sylphs of the Seasons with other Poems, in 1813, and, in 1841, Monaldi, a gothic novel set in eighteenth century Rome, Florence, and Naples. His Lectures on Art was published posthumously in 1850.

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow Dana (1881-1950)

H.W.L. Dana was born in Boston on 26 January 1881 to Edith Longfellow and Richard Henry Dana, III. Dana had two famous grandfathers: Henry Wadsworth Longfellow was Dana's maternal grandfather and Richard Henry Dana, Jr., was his paternal grandfather. Dana was a great grand-nephew of Washington Allston.

Dana was educated at the Browne and Nichols School in Cambridge and at Harvard University. After earning a PhD in 1910 he became an instructor and then professor of comparative literature. In 1917 he was dismissed from his post at Columbia University due to his pacifist beliefs, and from that point he lectured at various venues on both comparative literature and Soviet drama, in which he developed an expertise.

Dana was also interested in his family history and in the history of the Longfellow house. He researched the genealogy of both sides of his family and wrote many articles about his famous ancestors and about the house. He also did a great deal of research on the life and works of Washington Allston, intending to write a biography of him. This work was never finished, although selected chapters were published by the Cambridge Historical Society. Dana contributed notes for a Washington Allston exhibit mounted by the Detroit Institute of Arts and the Boston Museum of Fine Arts in 1947 and collaborated with Detroit's Edgar Preston Richardson on a catalogue raisonné of the existing and recorded paintings of Washington Allston. In 1943 Dana prepared and delivered a lecture (illustrated with lantern slides included in this collection) on Washington Allston in honor of the centennial of Allston's death.

Upon the death of his father in 1931, H.W.L. Dana became the trustee of the Washington Allston Trust, a fund which had arisen from shares purchased by Allston's friends to support him during his twenty-six-year work on his masterpiece Belshazzar's Feast. Dana consequently inherited the stewardship of Allston's works which had remained unfinished at the time of his death. Dana was also responsible for the fund, which was earmarked for the preservation of the works and for the purchase of others as they became available. The Allston works belonging to the trust and some belonging to the Dana family had been deposited at the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston. In 1941 the museum requested they be removed. Harry entered into correspondence with many museums and repositories across the country trying to find a suitable place for the collection. Meanwhile, they were temporarily housed in the Longfellow house and then in Harvard University's Fogg Art Museum, with the hope that ultimately they would all go there. Shortly

These letters can be found in Series IV. Trust. See also the Finding Aid for the Henry Wadsworth Longfellow (1881-1950) Papers, 1744-1971 (bulk dates 1850-1950).
