Manhattan Project History in December

- Enrico Fermi and his team produced the first controlled nuclear reaction, Chicago Pile-1, on a squash court in the University of Chicago on December 2, 1942. Two months later, February 1943, construction of the X-10 Graphite Reactor began in Oak Ridge, TN.
- The first Alpha racetrack at the Y-12 plant failed and was shut down for repairs and equipment rebuilding in December 1943. Other Alpha racetracks suffered similar issues soon after.
- Chemical separation of plutonium from the X-10 Graphite Reactor began in December 1943.
- Construction of the chemical separation plants at Hanford, WA was completed in December 1944.
- On December 25, 1946 the Soviets created their first nuclear chain reaction in a design similar to Enrico Fermi's reactor at the Chicago Met Lab.
