

National Trails

Color the Trails

Men from the wagon trains often hunted deer to feed their families. The one in this picture is a baby, or fawn. Its mother, called a doe, has left it safely hidden while she browses for food nearby. Fawns usually have white spots on their backs to help them blend in with the sun-speckled grass where they are hiding. Can you make white spots while coloring this fawn?

DEER FAWN

NPS/Cheyne Warren