This form is for use in nominating or requesting determinations for individual properties and districts. See instructions in How to Complete the National Register of Historic Places Registration Form (National Register Bulletin 16A). Complete each item by marking "x" in the appropriate box or by entering the information requested. If an item does not apply to the property being documented, enter "N/A" for "not applicable." For functions, architectural classification, materials and areas of significance, enter only categories and subcategories from the instructions. Place additional entries and narrative items on continuation sheets (NPS Form 10-900a). Use a typewriter, word processor, or computer, to complete all items.

District Description:

This seven by three block portion of the original city is bounded roughly by 11th Street East on the south, the alleyway that runs east of Central Avenue or White Street on the west, 18th Street East to the north, and the alleyway east of Washington Street on the east. The east side of Washington Street is excluded south of 14th Street East, and the entire street is excluded below 13th Street East. The east side of Jackson Street is excluded south of 12th Street East and the entire street below 1193-95 Jackson. Both sides of Jackson Street are included between 18th and 20th streets east. While principally a residential district, it does include a range of religious properties (historic and current), corner commercial buildings and in its northeast corner, a handful of industrial properties. The historical commercial properties include upper level residences.

The associated multiple property submission (MPS) titled "Dubuque-The Key City: The Architectural and Historical Resources of Dubuque, 1837-1955." That MPS utilized National Register architectural styles and types in defining a sequence of temporal historical contexts. By definition, time-fixed styles and types were variously applicable to those contexts in architectural terms, but many buildings were historically significant across multiple contexts. For the purposes of this district submission the district buildings will be organized by these styles and types and a more detailed address based property list will be appended to this submission. The Washington Area Residential Historic District is, as its title indicates, predominantly residential in its building type, having a range of notable religious buildings, a number of corner commercial buildings and a few factory buildings. Collectively the district as a whole meets the registration requirements set forth in the MPS by retaining sufficient integrity and by representing the earliest phase of near-downtown Dubuque growth and development. The district's riverfront location distinguishes it from the bluff-based residential neighborhoods (Cathedral Historic District, Jackson Park Historic District, NRHP). While all of these historic neighborhoods are located around the commercial downtown and on the level river terrace, this district as noted fronts to what approximated Dubuque's Mississippi River front. In reality due to sloughs and secondary bodies of water, the actual river channel was well to the east.

The district could be compared to Boston's "Back Bay," the latter area having backed up against the Charles River. In this Dubuque example the district comprises the city's oldest extant residential area as well as the section of the city that was bordered to the east by wetlands. Thus in historical times there was no possibility of using a numbered street to go anywhere east of the district. All through-traffic passed along the named streets, running north and south. In at least partial consequence of this pattern, but also due to the platting of the blocks, there are very few side street properties, the vast majority fronting on the named streets. This area is level in its topography, reflective of its placement on the alluvial terrace upon which the original city developed.

While primarily a residential area, this district stands out because of its higher proportion of brick residences, the earliest range of architectural styles and types, and the presence of a number of very early church edifices and other institutional buildings. A number of corner storefronts are present as are several industrial buildings on the northeast district periphery.

Houses are of varied setbacks with many earlier examples having a considerable setback. In some instances second houses are found along alleyways and in several cases buildings that front onto a side street address to the named street rather than the numbered one it fronts to. The district is largely tree-covered. There is a surprisingly low survival rate of historical outbuildings. The few early examples of early stables have been for the most part re-sided. Rusticated concrete block garages comprise the majority of the earliest surviving outbuilding examples. What typifies this residential area is the general lack of setbacks, nearly non-existent side yards and the associated narrow spaces between adjacent buildings. Side porches are commonly found on the south-sides of single dwellings, these being placed behind the shadow lines of the neighboring building to the south. Thus buildings to the east of a street have this porch arrangement on the right-hand side of their plans, while west side plans are reversed. Typically a side-hall plan also relegates the entry and stair side of the plan to the north resulting in a largely unfenestrated north wall.

The breakdown in age of construction for the district is impressive. Nearly three-quarters of all of the buildings pre-date 1884. A third pre-dates 1875, while 40 percent date to 1876-1883. Twelve percent date to 1885-1891 and just 16 percent post-date 1891 excluding the nine new properties. In most instances these dates are prior to dates based upon Sanborn maps which means many buildings are much earlier than their given years of construction would indicate.

The district name is not an ideal one but it is the earliest neighborhood reference that is known. The 1962 Victor Gruen report identified neighborhood names and boundaries and presumably used existing area names in lieu of coining new ones. As this document indicates, Washington Street is the least significant of the district's principal named streets by all measures so it is ironic that it rises to be the neighborhood's namesake. The more recently coined Old Town Neighborhood title, while reflecting the early age of the city's oldest neighborhood, smacks of "Ye Olde" tavern signage and stands to be confused with the Old Main Historic District.

The district includes two National Register of Historic Places listings. The Michael Hollenfanz residence, with two contributing buildings, was listed September 13, 1977. The Dubuque Casket Company Building, with one contributing buildings, was listed February 6, 2006.

Styles and Types:

The vernacular front and side gable sidewall plan is commonplace in the district and in Dubuque generally. It is a functional component for residences that front east or west in particular given that the hall and entry is then placed on the dark side of the plan resulting in a largely unfenestrated sidewall on that side. Just two examples are deemed to represent the more formal Federal townhouse model (McAlester), these being 1360 and 1657 Jackson Street. Most sidewall entries include transoms and a good number are double door entries again with transoms. Transom features remain in place even when they are paneled over. Row houses per se are uncommon in Dubuque and the city's best example, of seven units, is located at 1765-95 Washington Street.

There are 11 examples of the Italianate style and all of these are located on White and Jackson streets. This style encompasses most of the early churches and related church buildings. Narrowed elongated windows, representative of this style, worked well with the narrower residential plans of the district, although near-floor length window openings are rare occurrences. Bracketed eaves lines are the style's hallmarks and are commonly found on multi-unit plans. Triangular cross-dormers, and pediment forms are also associated with this style and are found on the same duplexes and tri-plexes.

The Gothic Revival style accounts for the remainder of later church designs (1276, 1584, 1702, 1772 White Street and 1698, 1795 Jackson). Gothic style examples number 8 (with two buildings at 1584 White Street), all of these being churches or church related buildings. These examples offer lancet windows, pilaster (with shoulder stones) framed bays, with shoulder stones, steeples, square towers, and oculus windows. Several churches have lost original fenestration due to residential conversion or have gained substantial educational wings and new entrances.

Second Empire examples number 12 buildings (1263, 1494-96, 1913 Jackson Street and 1128-34, 1200-02, 1274, 1539, 1555-57, 1584, 1635, 1651, 1709-11 White Street). All of these are in the west part of the district and all but four examples are on White Street. This is a clear indication of the architectural primacy of that street. All examples have a mansard attic/roof component although a few building designs employ a single plane (façade) vertical mansard-like cladding on the uppermost floor. True mansard examples, have a four-sided angled mansard attic cap. All of the district examples are important due to their earlier building dates. Many Dubuque Second Empire examples date to the turn-of-the century and reflect a later German cultural revival. Six examples pre-date 1884, while all but one pre-date 1891, just one dates as late as 1896. The form is particularly popular on larger mixed-use buildings. All examples are brick and all but two are two-story plans, the others three with the attic level. Most are addressed not as duplexes or triplexes, but as single units. The distribution of these examples is notable, with all but two occurring on White Street, the others low down on Jackson Street, with no Washington Street examples.

Queen Anne examples number just three and all of these represent later modifications of pre-existing vernacular examples (1133 White, 1300 Jackson, 1502 Washington). These examples feature bays or oriel windows, turrets, patterned shingle work, side wings, and wrap-around porches.

The sole Romanesque style example is located at 1930 Jackson Street. The district is primarily comprised of smaller-scale residential building forms. Some 38 properties are duplexes, triplexes (6) and fourplexes (3) and there are two apartment row houses or buildings (1765-95 Washington, seven units, 1891-1909, and 1100 White, 1870, unknown number of units). Each of these represents multiple units, for a total of 103 addresses, or 37 percent of the total number of primary properties. Side gable duplexes number 31 and only six of these are frame buildings. Two have parapet fronts and one has a hip roof. Thirty-one gable front duplexes are of frame construction. Brick is the material of choice for side-gable duplex plans. One subtype of particular interest is the broad square-plan gable front duple/triplex. They tend to be of early construction date, with all but one example pre-dating 1884. Most have twin-front and rear attic lights and a high profile. Examples are found at 1403-05, 1428-30, 1609-11, and 1664-68-70, and 1725-31-37 Washington. All are found on this street.

The Classical Revival style represents the later infilling of the district, in most cases being replacement homes that removed first-generation residences. The 14 properties (1248, 1250, 1257; 1308, 1318, 1404-06, 1530, 1710, 1920, 1949 Jackson Street, 1503, 1543, 1693-95 Washington Street and 1722-35 White Street) are concentrated in the center of the district and to the east, reflecting the later infilling that typified this part of the district. The style is more broadly represented in the form of returned eaves or closed eave gable ends but is augmented by more authentic examples that add Palladian-like gable end window sets or other Classical components. The style overlays with earlier massings as well.

Vernacular plans, commonly combined with some stylistic components (most commonly a sidewall entry) predominate within the district. Gable front houses (two full stories) number 63 and are evenly split in frame and brick construction. Two examples are of rusticated concrete block construction and one frame example is stuccoed.

Gable front cottage (less than two stories) examples are infrequent with but 7 examples and only two are simple single story examples. Just one of the 7 examples is of brick construction.

There are 9 gable front duplexes, 5 of brick construction. With but one example on White Street, these are in the central or east part of the district.

Side gable vernacular house plans are less common with just 21 examples or a third of the gable front type count. These are more commonly of brick construction (13 examples). These are also in the district core (Jackson Street) or to the east with but two White Street examples. Side gable cottages consist of but two frame examples, both on Jackson Street.

Dubuque County,

The full two-story side gable type becomes more numerous and visually dominant in its multi-unit form, with 25 duplexes and a single tri-plex example. Brick examples again predominate with 19 properties and two frame examples emulate the brick with faux brick or permastone claddings. These examples are predominantly on the cross streets and Washington Street where 12 examples make this type the most dominant on that lesser street's architecture. There is one single-story duplex example (1846-48 Jackson Street) and it is of brick construction.

Hip roof house examples number just four examples and there is but a single true foursquare property (145 17th Street).

Popular house or cottage types include one Cape Cod cottage (1472 White Street), one Dutch Colonial cottage (1398 Jackson Street).

Parapet front duplexes number 5 examples but these are visually important within the larger mix of duplex types, particularly as they inter-play with combination commercial/apartment examples. All but one of the former are of brick construction. They are on the periphery of the district along White and Washington streets in even numbers.

There are 20 commercial properties and these include two newer buildings. A total of 8 of the 20 are non-contributing properties. The distribution across the district is clearly concentrated with Jackson Street claiming 11 of the total. This is good evidence that Jackson Street functioned as the "backbone" of commercial activity. There are but two commercial properties on Washington Street and 4 on White Street. There are two factory buildings (1866 Jackson Street, 1798 Washington Street) both are contributing and are in the northeast corner of the district.

The district includes nine vacant lots, three of these being located on cross-streets. One property contains just a secondary garage building (1536 Washington Street). There is just one new residence (1660 Washington Street, 1993). Two traffic circles on Washington Street are counted as non-contributing structures.

The majority of secondary buildings are of concrete block construction. Substantial buildings are garages and almost all of the other examples are temporary storage sheds small in scale and recent in date. Later-date garages are still mostly of concrete block make up while historical period examples use a rusticated block. These later block garages read visually as historic buildings but only those built after 1965 are deemed to be non-contributing. Flat roofs predominate. Many garages are multi-car and extend fully across the rear of lots. Frame garages of the historical period tend to be one-car hip roof types. These tend to have been resided but are deemed to be contributing if their form and massing are visible.

Frame houses are in every case re-clad. Historically they would have had a narrow clapboard with corner boards. Wood shingle applications in gable ends are not common, nor is the use of stringcourse trim work. Soffits are not ornamented in any manner apart from a frame edging in gable fronts. Window frames are mostly slightly projected beyond the wall plane and the re-cladding makes them flush. Given these baseline features or lack thereof, re-cladding does not obscure original details in most instances, the exception being if window openings are covered up. Primary buildings that have been re-clad are deemed to be contributing if the basic form remains visible. This includes porch profiles, fenestration, entryways, bays or the like. Porches that retain their superstructure and form yet have lost supports or original bases do not render a property non-contributing. Porches that have been built in with the downsizing or elimination of windows, or completely replaced porch systems do make their associated buildings non-contributing.

Property List and Evaluations:

Contributing "(number)" and non-contributing "(number nc)" are tabulated in descending order. Both counts jump between the first and third columns. Non-contributing counts are bolded.

1609-1613 Washington Street, pre-1872:  These are two contributing (219) buildings. The plan is that of abroad. This is a contributing two-story gable front frame duplex that counts as two buildings based on split ownership.	This duplex appears on the 1872 lithograph of Dubuque and the 1884 Sanborn map.  Alterations: It is contributing only because of its retained vernacular plan. Otherwise it has lost a full-width front porch and gable front attic lights if present are covered by a residing.	None.
1618 Washington Street, pre-1872:  This is a contributing (220) two-story front gable frame house plan.	This house appears on the 1872 lithograph of Dubuque and the 1884 Sanborn map.  Alterations: While re-sided a square attic light remains and the hip roof front porch is enclosed but not built in.	Non-contributing ( 51 nc ) shed.
1620-1622 Washington Street, 1892-1908:  This is a contributing (221) two-story brick side gabled duplex. It features stepped end walls, and a triangular cross gable or dormer with an attic window.	This duplex is squeezed in after 1891 (Sanborn map), the rear wing being constrained by the presence of the house to the north.  Alterations: A new reproduction full-width front porch replaces a recently removed metal full-width canopy.	None.
1623-1629-1635 Washington Street, 1891:  This is a contributing (222) two-story brick triplex plan with a parapet front. It counts as three buildings due to split ownership.	Only the foundation for this building was present as of 1891 (Sanborn map).  Alterations: There likely was a lost metal cornice.	None.
1628 Washington Street, pre-1884:  This is a contributing (223) building two-story frame T-plan house.	This building is shown on the 1884 Sanborn map. The rear south wing of this cross-plan forced the later duplex to the south to alter its profile to wrap-around its neighbor.  Alterations: It is contributing despite residing and the reconstruction of its porch base due unusual façade fenestration.	Non-contributing ( 52 nc ) garage.
1649 Washington Street, pre-1872:  This is a contributing (224) two-story gable front frame house plan. Features include an diamond attic front light and a right-hand side hall entry.	This house appears to be shown on the 1872 lithograph of Dubuque and the 1884 (Sanborn map).  Alterations: New front porch.	Contributing (225) 1936 concrete block garage.
1663-1665 (1669) Washington Street, pre-1872:	This building appears on the 1872	None.

1715 Washington Street, John Sieg Cottage, 1869 (enlarged 1885-91): This is a contributing (232) two-story gable front brick house. It has an unusual frame hip roof full-length south end porch that reflects its fronting to 17th Street rather than to Washington Street. Shifted to the north edge of its parcel, this allowed for a substantial open yard to the south. The plan is unusual in that it presents its gable end to the east but the entrance is on the south side wall.	John Siege built a 1.5 story brick cottage that was expanded later (Dubuque Herald, , December 13, 1868; December 16, 1869; Dubuque Times, January 1, 1869). Alterations: A three-sided bay, now removed after 1962.	Non-contributing (59 nc) garage.

District Alterations:

The district has suffered a small number of demolitions since it was formally identified and documented in 2003. The majority of these losses (three buildings) were on the numbered side streets. The west side of White Street, beginning half way between 14th and 15th streets, has been almost completely cleared away due to the construction of the new Prescott Elementary School. The southeast corner of 20th and Jackson streets lost several buildings for the construction of a filling station. Within the district the most notable loss were the brick buildings at 1364 and 1368 White Street. These removals in conjunction with newer buildings to the south, leave a gap along the east side of White Street. Several church parking lots have also removed buildings on Jackson and White streets north of 17th Street but these are not recent losses. A single building at 1753 Washington Street was also recently demolished. Collectively these losses mostly impact the southwest corner of the district. One alteration dating to the 1990s was the construction of two traffic circles along Washington Street, created to impede through-truck traffic. One of these was just transformed into an artistic painted plaza.

Integrity Evaluation:

The overall historical integrity of this district is very good and the district retains all seven aspects of historical integrity. This large predominantly residential district has survived largely intact, along with its associated churches and a range of storefronts. Given the small number of side street buildings, it has a north/south oriented patterning with tightly packed buildings. The level of integrity is directly reflected in the very low number of non-contributing buildings in the district. There are very few instances where historic buildings have been greatly altered or covered over. The methodology for determining contributing status within the district is given at the beginning of the building inventory. In summary however, the vast majority of district buildings retain their fenestration patterns, their massings, their ground level integrity and their exterior materials. The only exception to the last point are the frame residences, that have been re-clad but in such a manner as to not obscure fenestration, ornament or massing. The core of the district is the predominance of brick buildings.

Integrity of location is vested in the level terrace setting of the district and particularly in its association with industrial buildings to the south, former wetlands to the east, and the Eagle Point Peninsula with its major east/west running roads. Historically the traveler couldn't go very far east using a numbered street given the proximity of the Mississippi River floodplain. Today with filling and the re-working of 16th Street, there is at least one direct route east from within the district.

Integrity of design is embodied in the surviving original plat with rectangular blocks, each with a north/south running alleyway centered upon it, that orient north/south with their longer dimensions. The East Dubuque plan employed narrower lots to the east of Jackson Street, while the original town plat, with larger numbered city lots, applies to the west half of the district. Design is also vested in the buildings, individually and collectively. The latter are low in profile, being mostly two-stories in height with a predominance of brick construction. Landmark buildings, churches and their spires and particular, project above the district. Most buildings are advanced on their lots with minimal porch space and side yards, let alone front yards are few in number. The district is predominantly vernacular in type, materials and plan, all built in substantial form reflective of a German speaking association.

Setting is retained with the same characteristics previously referenced, topography, plat, architecture and also important, an intact tree canopy. Porches are important to setting in that they connect building interiors and the outside world and the district retains a surprising proportion of early porches as well as a good number of restored porches.

Materials favor brick construction, which remains visible, unlike re-clad frame buildings. Stone foundations, porch materials and wood cornices represent this aspect. Of particular note is the range of window arch/lintel treatments and their various materials, stone, cast stone, cast iron and brick. A number of very early storefronts exhibit solid stone lintels and cast iron columns, representing some of the city's earliest examples of this building type.

Workmanship is most notably vested in brick and stonework, ornamentation, some original chimney profiles, porch detailing, cast iron work and in undocumented interior features (trim work, fireplaces, metal ceilings).

Feeling is strongly represented by the district. This is one of the largest Dubuque residential districts but one that also hosts a large number of early churches (including many non-Catholic) and a scattering of more substantial institutional and commercial/industrial buildings. Cumulatively the scale and character of the district conveys a palpable sense of time and place.

Integrity of association is mostly the district's "back bay" function as part of the early city development. While proximate to the north downtown along upper Central Avenue, it was principally residential in land use but a host of churches, and church halls made this part of Dubuque a destination point for most residents. It was the closest residential neighborhood relative to the nearby mill-working district to the south and it had the advantage of being a key part of the "walking city" despite the provision of public transit.

Future District Plans:

There are no large-scale municipal plans for this district apart from a general expectation that this National Register listing will foster neighborhood identity and community and will protect the district properties from demolition. It is also hoped that property owners will avail themselves of the Iowa State historic rehabilitation tax credit program.

8. Historical Significance:

Architects List, Continued:

Heer & Naescher

Naescher, Edward

The Washington Street Historic District is recommended as being National Register of Historic Places eligible on the basis of its architectural significance (Criterion C) and its historical significance (Criterion A, Community Planning and Development). The architectural significance rests collectively on the fact that district developed substantially and solidly and was largely full built up at an early date compared to other extant Dubuque historic neighborhoods. This is the only substantial surviving vestige (apart from portions of the Cathedral and Jackson Park residential districts) of the original residential section of the city. The district represents the dominance of vernacular, and in a very high proportion brick types. The district contains all of the earliest surviving Protestant church buildings and its overlay with the St. Mary's Catholic Parish is the only such contrasting combination of these contrasting religious faiths. The sheer scale of the district speaks to the function of a "walking city" set in immediate proximity to the city's industrial plants. The vast majority of the district buildings pre-date 1891 and a great many date to the years 1855-1870 (the earliest documented dating to 1866). The buildings include a very high proportion of brick buildings (unlike the more distant neighborhoods to the north and northeast, Couler Valley and Eagle Point) and there is a much higher state of physical integrity, with minimal new intrusive construction. The district is also architecturally significant due to the large number of significant church edifices and related religious buildings, including a good number of Protestant churches. Most notable of these is St. Mary Roman Catholic Church (1864-66). Academic residential styles are also well represented, with a strong Second Empire presence along White and Jackson streets.

The district is significant historically for its association with the early German speaking population of Dubuque. This linkage is best illustrated by the clustering of the several coffin-making factories around the district to the northeast and east, but also its proximity to the railroad yards and the woodworking district to the southeast. The presence of a number of the city's earliest protestant churches attests to the early history of those important institutions. The district also contains a good number of important retail business buildings and these interpret the nexus of small-scale commercial activities within residential neighborhoods. The period of significance is 1866-1965. The beginning date being the earliest documented building, the ending date being the 50-year National Register program standard for determining historical significance.

This district is nominated in association with the multiple property document "Dubuque—The Key City: The Architectural and Historical Resources of Dubuque, Iowa, 1837-1955." That document defines a range of historical contexts (pages E9-175), a range of Dubuque styles (pages F-176-268), and further defines a residential historic district as an eligible property type. This district is recommended as being National Register eligible as a residential district under the following five contexts, 1859-1955. These contexts are:

Frontier City on the Mississippi River, 1833-1858.
The Key City, 1859-1893
Fitful Growth and Maturation, 1893-1910
An Era of Stability, 1910-1955
The Architecture of Dubuque, 1833-1955

The architectural significance of the district embraces a good number of very early and very well preserved houses, as well as the turn-of-the-century and early 20th century house designs that comprise the majority of its houses.

Dubuque County,

The multiple property document defines a range of individual property types including the residential type, the multiple-family residential type, as well as the residential district property type (pages F-259-302). Registration requirements are established for each of these property types. The following requirements are set for the district property type:

- Residential, Commercial, Industrial District properties must be directly associated with the City of Dubuque, 1833 to present.
- Residential, Commercial, Industrial District properties must have a direct and significant association with one or more of the established historical contexts which are defined in this document.
- Residential, Commercial, Industrial District properties Individual institutional properties eligible under Criterion A must retain the integrity aspects of location, design and the cumulative aspects of feeling and association. The property has to be in its original location, and its original design must be visually apparent, unobstructed by additions or alterations. The integrity aspects of setting, materials and workmanship are expected to have changed the most, and their substantial loss does not disqualify eligibility.
- Residential, Commercial, Industrial District properties eligible under Criterion B are eligible if they retain the same integrity aspects required for Criterion A. The aspects of workmanship and materials must at least be minimally reflected in the visible façade.
- Residential, Commercial, Industrial District properties eligible under Criterion C must represent a significant style, type, period or method of construction. Rarity of example is a justified reason for significance if the property represents a once common type now rarely found. Many Dubuque properties will warrant state or national levels of significance because they combine architectural significance with rarity. Significance is possessed if the property represents and interprets the working career of a notable artist, architect, engineer or landscape architect and explains how that individual contributed to their respective fields. A property is significant if it possesses high artistic qualities, which characterize the architectural heritage of Dubuque.
- Residential, Commercial, Industrial District properties are eligible under Criterion D if they possess the potential to yield information through archeological treatment. For subsurface remains of buildings, structures or objects, it is expected that the integrity aspects of materials, workmanship, and the cumulative aspects of feeling and association are sufficiently retained so that the property is recognizable and qualifies to yield information. For the subsurface remains of dumps, sinks, or other cultural debris, it is necessary that the deposits be relatively intact and undisturbed. The individual nomination form must identify key research questions to be answered and must explain how the information yielded from the property will shed light on these questions.

The document specifically recommends the Washington Area Residential Historic District as being National Register eligible. Finally the document identifies the following district buildings as being distinctive examples of Dubuque's historic architecture.

Italianate Style: St. John's Lutheran Church, 1294 White Street
Italianate Style: St. Matthew's Lutheran Church, 1780 White Street
Gothic Revival Style: St. Mary's Catholic Church, 1584 White Street
Second Empire Style: Hollenfelz House (NRHP), 1651 White Street
Classical Revival Style: Hafner Block, 1365 Jackson Street

District Historical Development:

The 1866 lithograph (Figure 2) documents the early development of the area and clearly shows that building activity clustered along White and Jackson streets. Washington Street in fact terminated at 14th Street. Buildings east of Jackson appear to be mostly of frame construction. The dominant presence is St. Mary Roman Catholic Church, known early on as the “German” Catholic Church in the city. It was built 1864-66 and likely was a major influence in pushing the development of this upper end of the old city. The German emigrant influx after the Civil War provided a population base to fuel that growth.

By 1872 development had shifted eastward to include both sides of Washington Street, but Elm Street was largely undeveloped above 14th Street. There was just one major industry in the area, the Dubuque Furniture and Burial Case factory at 18th and Washington. The railroad lines to the east formed a buffer between this neighborhood and a developing one to the east that centered on Maple between 14th and 17th streets.

Eighteenth Street had some importance as an east/west link to the rail yards to the east. By 1884 a hotel (18th and Washington), the aforementioned factory and a flourmill were all located along that street. A developing industrial sector was emerging along Elm Street between East 11th and 19th streets. Two factories, including the Iowa Coffin Company, were east of this district.

City directories give an approximation of the number of commercial properties that were in operation (this is based on listings which appeared in the separate business section of each directory, a list that included the more prominent businesses).

Dubuque County,

From the start, Washington Street lagged behind White and Jackson streets and didn't catch up until 1890. White dominated Jackson as well until 1880. The commercial activities covered a broad range and went well beyond corner groceries and saloons. At the peak of activity in 1890, there were just eight groceries in operation and six saloons. Small manufactures included blacksmiths, cigar makers, carpet weavers, dressmakers, cobbler, cooper, church furniture makers, express men, insurance dealers, music teachers, engravers, marble cutters, wagon maker, and a stone yard. Large-scale factories were at each end of Washington Street. Service businesses included a chimney sweep, livery, boarding house, hotel, baker and confectioner. Retail businesses included single instances of stove seller, notions (several), meats, books and stationery, drug store, feed warehouses (several), billiard hall, and dry goods. A good number of contractor/builders resided and worked from the district, eight in 1890. One non-commercial service, that is included in this tally, is a sub-police station that was in operation at 13th and Washington streets.

It is interesting to note the close correlation between the directory listings and Sanborn maps for 1883 and 1884 respectively. This is not the case in comparing 1890 directory and the 1891 Sanborn data. Clearly there were several periods of increase in commercial activity, notably 1870, the early 1880s, and the late 1890s. The tally for businesses drops abruptly as of 1891 but recovers at the turn of the century.

The 1889 birds eye view indicates that housing had advanced to the west side of Elm Street and the line of factories was already well developed. Coffin factories were at 12th and Elm, and 18th and Washington, a flourmill was at 18th and Pine, and an icehouse was at 14th and Pine. By 1909 there were factories at 18th and Washington (Schmid and the Dubuque Casket Company), 18th and Elm (Dubuque Altar Manufacturing and the flour mill), 17th and Elm (Metz Manufacturing), and 16th and Elm (Iowa Coffin Company). From the south the main industrial area was steadily advancing, displacing housing and less-intensive land uses. By 1909 the solid factory district's north boundary was 11th Street East.

Dubuque's Coffin Making Industry:

The Dubuque Casket Company, which was located in the district and is one of the key buildings in the district, was the second Dubuque casket company, a predecessor firm, the Dubuque Furniture and Burial Case Company, was on this same site (and across the street to the west) and was established in 1877, and another, the Iowa Coffin Company, located just two blocks to the southeast at Elm and 15th streets, was established in 1880 and incorporated in 1882. By 1911 it apparently the largest coffin-making firm, being capitalized at $350,000 with 140 employees. A third firm, apparently the Hawkeye Casket Company, was organized in 1905 and remained in operation as late as 1924. It occupied the former Key City Furniture Company plant at 11th Street East and Elm streets. The initial Dubuque Casket Company building dated to 1895 and cost $7,000 to construct. It was described as a four-story building. A $12,000 addition was built 1904-05, and this was followed by a $60,000 addition built in 1919. Comparison of the 1903 photo shown above indicates that this last-named addition nearly doubled the building frontage to the south (Dubuque Herald, January 23, 1896; Dubuque Telegraph Herald, March 19, 1905, December 22, 1919; Greater Dubuque, 1911, p. 17).

For whatever reason, all of these companies located in this same part of the city, arrayed in an arc that ran from Elm and 16th to 18th streets east and Washington Street. Supplementing the coffin making firms were Schmid Manufacturing Company (also 18th Street East and Washington Street, another key surviving district industrial plant), which produced casket hardware, and the Dubuque Altar Manufacturing Company.

The Dubuque Furniture and Burial Case Company established this trend and by 1880, had in just three years grown from "a comparatively small beginning it was grown into proportions that place it beside the largest establishments of the kind in the West." The firm had a retail storefront for its extensive furniture line at 584 Main Street. It was one of a number of large municipal furniture makers but it also made a specialty of its coffin manufacturing, in which it did “a very heavy trade.” The company was established February 1, 1877 with a capitalization of just $16,000. By 1880 it employed 50 workers. Its board of directors was comprised by John Hartman, Henry Huber and A. Koester (Dubuque Telegraph Herald, October 19, 1933).

Figures 10-11: [left] Dubuque Casket Company, c.1911, view southeast (Towards A Greater Dubuque), [right] current view (Dubuque County Assessor, 2015)

The Dubuque Casket Company was established in 1892 and its initial officers were F. A. Belier, president, J. K. Deming (local bank president), vice president, and A. C. Gasser, secretary-treasurer. The Enterprise noted, “...its plant, at Washington and Eighteenth streets, is one of the very largest manufacturing establishments in the city. It is devoted to the manufacture of caskets, robes, linings and other accessories and to a general jobbing business in funeral directors’ supplies, such as chemicals, instruments, and everything used by undertakers.” By 1911 it was capitalized at $100,000 and employed 15 salesmen. Its annual products were valued at $300,000. The plant was an exception in that it owned its own lumberyard. It was the first concern “west of the Mississippi) to make its own burial robes and coffin liners, and was a pioneer firm in those areas. Its market area included North and South Dakota, Iowa, Illinois, Wisconsin, Missouri, Nebraska, and Wyoming (Enterprise, c.1902; Greater Dubuque, 1911, pp. 17, 51).

The 1884 Sanborn Map places the Dubuque Furniture and Burial Case Company in three buildings on both sides of 18th and Washington. Hamlin & Wagner built a three-story cabinet factory on one of the corners in 1871 and this might have been one and the same as Peter Klaur’s three-story cornice works that stood on the southeast corner of Washington and 18th streets as of 1891. It is possible that that building is incorporated into the present building. A disastrous fire struck the Dubuque Furniture and Burial Case complex in early 1883, this could have involved the buildings on either side of 18th and might have left the one on this corner untouched (Dubuque Tribune, December 12, 1871; Dubuque Herald, December 17, 1871; April 29, 1883). The three-story building remained as of 1891, and the present complex is shown on the 1909/36 map, by which time all of the building had been raised to four stories. A small loading dock was then present on the southeast corner. It remained through 1962 and the present south addition post-dates that date. Directories list the company here through 1952.

This aerial view nicely documents the row of coffin making firms, which were north and east of the district. In the foreground from left to right can be seen the Dubuque Casket Company, Dubuque Alter Manufacturing Company (above Dubuque Casket), Metz Manufacturing, and Iowa Coffin Company. The Casino and St. Mary's church complex are visible in the left foreground.

Churches in the district:

As noted previously, St. Mary Roman Catholic Church was the largest church in the district, dating to 1864-66 and it would develop an entire school and religious complex, adding a rectory, sisters' residence, parochial school, and after 1900, a major recreational center, the Casino, just to the north of the church's square. It wasn't the first to move to this area, St. John's Lutheran Church, credited with being the mother church of all city Lutheran churches, was located at 1276 White as of 1855. The present church dates to 1885. Zion Lutheran Church, which dates to 1873, was built at 1698 Jackson and is one of the city's oldest surviving smaller church designs. Immanuel Lutheran Church, located at 1795 Jackson, was established there in 1878, its current building, greatly altered, dates to 1887-88. St. Matthews Lutheran Church, at 1772 White, dates to 1908 and was the last church congregation to locate within the neighborhood. St. Johns also operated a parochial school.

Verbal Boundary Description:

The southwest corner of the district is centered at the intersection of East 11th and White Streets. The boundary follows White Street north to 1467 White Street, on the west side of the street, where it runs west to the west line of City Block 432, from which point it continues northwards to East 18th Street. The boundary then runs easterly to the southwest corner of City Block 490, where the boundary turns northward and continues to East 20th Street. The boundary turns easterly along that street to Jackson Street, where it turns southerly to the north boundary line of 1940 Jackson Street. The boundary turns eastwardly along that line continuing to the alley that is the east boundary line of said address. It continues south to East 18th Street where it turns easterly along said street, continuing to the alley that forms the east boundary of the former Dubuque Casket Company at 1789 Washington Street. The boundary turns southward along said alleyway continuing to East 14th Street. There it turns westerly along that street to Washington Street. Turning southward on that street the boundary runs to East 13th Street where it turns westerly continuing to the alleyway that parallels Washington Street to the west. Following that alleyway it runs southward to East 12th Street. There it continues westwardly to the alleyway that forms the east boundary of City Lot 480. The boundary runs southwardly along said alleyway to East 11th Street where it turns west and continues to the point of beginning.

Boundary Justification:

This 35-block district includes the entire residential neighborhood as it developed historically. It excludes lesser historical residences along Elm Street to the west and a range of lost buildings to the south. The west boundary is now defined by larger-scale demolition, although that excluded area combined commercial and residential buildings. The northern boundary remains contiguous to other residential blocks but the boundary is based on the inclusion of the same architectural and historical mix found in the district as a whole.
