Verbal Boundary Description (Describe the boundaries of the property.)

The historic boundary of the Benjamin Boorman House consists of an irregular ten-sided polygon that encompasses the Benjamin Boorman House, surrounding domestic space historically associated with the residence, and a noncontributing garage. The northern boundary runs east to west (starting at the western edge of the Union Street sidewalk) for 151 feet, jogs south for 20 feet and continues west for 352 feet. The western boundary runs north-south for 220 feet and connects the northern and the southern boundary lines. The southern boundary runs west to east for 502 feet, ending at the western edge of the Union Street sidewalk. Beginning at its intersection with the southern boundary, the eastern boundary runs north for 15 feet along the western edge of the Union Street sidewalk, then runs along the edges of a small separate tax parcel set within the larger Boorman House parcel. The small parcel measures 65 feet on each side. North of this, the eastern boundary continues to run north along the western edge of the Union Street sidewalk for 160 feet until it meets the northern boundary. (See included site map.)

Boundary Justification (Explain why the boundaries were selected.)

The original National Register nomination for the Benjamin Boorman House prepared in 1976 did not include a boundary map, or a boundary description or justification. However, the nomination stated that the nominated property consists of 2 acres. Accordingly, the historic boundary has been determined to follow the 2 acre tax parcel as it existed when the nomination was written.

The historic boundary has been delineated to encompass the Benjamin Boorman House and the surrounding domestic space historically associated with the property. A separate tax parcel in the southeast corner of the Boorman tax parcel is not included in this historic boundary as this 65 foot square parcel was created in 1962, fourteen years before the Boorman House was listed in the National Register of Historic Places.
