

2013 Saturday Ranger Series

Spend your Saturdays with us this summer as we explore the area's Civil War history – on battlefields and in historic buildings, on city streets and country lanes, from the James River to the Chickahominy.

- > We'll explore Lee's first command victory at the 1862 Battle of Gaines' Mill – and the civilians whose farms became killing fields.
- > We'll see how the war might have ended one year after it began had the Union Navy been successful in reaching the city of Richmond.
- > We'll find out what happened during the bread riots, when food became scarce, how Richmond's industry – especially the Tredegar Iron Works – impacted the war effort, and the advent of photography and how it recorded scenes of war for audiences back home.
- > We'll look at Civil War railroads and the impact of terrain and landscape.
- > We'll learn what African Americans in Hanover and Henrico counties experienced as the tides of war rose and receded, and the heroic role of the United States Colored Troops in our area in the final autumn of the war.

Join us as we explore what the Civil War meant to the people of its time, and what it means to us in ours.
