Discover the Places that Make America Great!

The definitive guide to the country's National Historic Landmarks is now available. NATIONAL LANDMARKS, AMERICA'S TREASURES: The National Park Foundation's Complete Guide to National Historic Landmarks was written by S. Allen Chambers, Jr., with a foreword by Hillary Rodham Clinton.

National Historic Landmarks are nationally significant buildings, structures, sites, districts, and objects officially designated by the Secretary of the Interior. Chambers writes: "The diversity that characterizes our nation's heritage is documented by nearly 2,300 National Historic Landmarks...reflecting almost every imaginable important aspect of our nation's history. The range of properties represented in the program reflects changing perceptions about which events, ideas, and experiences have most influenced American history....They are places where significant historical events occurred, where prominent Americans worked or lived, that represent the ideas that shaped the nation, that provided important information about our past, or that are outstanding examples of design or construction." Read about such nationally significant places as the Mark Twain House (Connecticut), Helen Keller's childhood home (Alabama), the Little Tokyo Historic District (California), and the site of the first detonation of a nuclear device (New Mexico). Organized by state and county, the book describes each National Historic Landmark, and includes 380 illustrations. For more information about this book contact John Wiley & Sons at 1-800-225-5945 or custser@wiley.com. For more NHL information see National Historic Landmarks Program

Teaching with Historic Places has added four classroom lesson plans to the National Register Web site in January. Two of these lessons, "The Battle of Mill Springs: The Civil War Divides a Border State" and "The Siege of Port Hudson: 'Forty Days and Nights in the Wilderness of Death,'" are new lesson plans being introduced on the Web. "First Battle of Manassas: An End to the Innocence" and "The Battle of Bunker Hill: Now We Are at War" are previously-published lessons now available on the Internet. The lesson plans are available at: National Register of Historic Places web site. Teaching with Historic Places uses properties listed in the National Register of Historic Places to enliven history, social studies, geography, civics, and other subjects.

The National Register of Historic Places is pleased to promote awareness of and appreciation for the historical accomplishments of African Americans during African American History Month. Visit our new African American History Month website, featuring historic properties listed in the National Register, National Register publications, and National Park units commemorating the events and people, the designs and achievements that help illustrate African American contributions to American history. Look for links to other sites associated with African American history including properties recently added to the Aboard the Underground Railroad travel itinerary and other National Register travel itineraries. Additional information on African American history and a message from the Director of the National Park Service, Robert Stanton, regarding the Park Service's attempts to reflect the diversity of American culture, can be found here under the "Learn More" section.

Five online Teaching with Historic Places lesson plans examine different aspects of African American history, including the recent "The Siege of Port Hudson: 'Forty Days and Nights in the Wilderness of Death." This lesson plan helps illustrate the importance of Mississippi to both the North and the South during the Civil War, and records the 48 day siege by the Union of the Confederate defenses in 1863 which held a strategic bluff overlooking the Mississippi River. Check out the new Teaching with Historic Places lesson plan, "The Liberty Bell: From Obscurity to Icon," which tells the story of the growth of the 2,000 pound Liberty Bell from its creation in 1753 to its growing fame as an international symbol of liberty. Readings, visual images, maps, and activities explore the history and meaning of the bell hung from the Pennsylvania State House when the Continental Congress declared independence from Great Britain.

Explore the only complete guide to America’s National Historic Landmarks in the National Park Foundation’s new book, National Landmarks, America's Treasures. Written by bestselling architectural historian S. Visit our new African American History Month web-site, featuring historic properties listed in the National Register, National Register publications, and National Park units commemorating the events and people, the designs and achievements that help illustrate African American contributions to American history. The National Register of Historic Places’ Underground web travel itinerary, Aboard the Underground Railroad, now provides links to on-line publications and model nominations to assist researchers in documenting and preparing National Register nominations for properties associated with the Underground Railroad.

Underground Railroad Resources in the United States Theme Study was prepared by the National Historic Landmarks (NHL) Survey program. It includes a history of the Underground Railroad, identifies historic property types, establishes registration requirements for National Register listing and NHL designation and includes an annotated bibliography. Exploring a Common Past: Researching and Interpreting the Underground Railroad provides a historic context for the Underground Railroad, information on using primary sources, a case study that tracks an escape from Virginia to Canada, and an extensive bibliography. Researchers can also download copies of model NHL nominations for Rokeby, Addison County, Vermont; F. Julius LeMoyne House, Washington County, Pennsylvania; and the John P. Parker House, Brown County, Ohio.

The on-line publications and model nominations are available at: http://www.cr.nps.gov/nr/underground/ulrnmore.htm

Secretary of the Interior Bruce Babbitt on March 1 announced the designation of 18 sites in 16 states as National Historic Landmarks. The designated sites from Florida to California were recommended by the National Park System Advisory Board for their diverse history and because they contain aspects of America's national heritage. They are listed below.

"These historic properties are the storytellers of our rich American history," Babbitt said. "Our diverse national heritage is locked in the very walls and grounds of these historic structures and will be preserved for future generations to learn from and enjoy."

National Historic Landmarks are identified by theme and special studies are prepared or overseen by National Park Service historians and archeologists. Landmark designation is the federal government's official recognition of the national importance of historic properties. The National Park Service's National Register of Historic Places and the City of Cumberland, Maryland, proudly invite you to explore the new online travel itinerary, All Aboard For Cumberland. This travel itinerary promoting heritage tourism focuses on the sites that tell the stories of Cumberland's economic and residential growth, social community, and civic development. A portion of the Cumberland near the terminus of the C@O Canal has been recognized as the State of Maryland's first Certified Heritage Area. An online city map, photographs, site descriptions and an essay help visitors discover more about such areas as the Downtown Cumberland Historic District, the Washington Street Historic District and the Allegany County Courthouse. Cumberland is the fourth of more than 30 communities and regions working directly with the National Register of Historic Places to create travel itineraries. This and other travel itineraries can be found on our web site: National Register of Historic Places Home

Two online Teaching with Historic Places lesson plans examine different aspects of American history. "From Canterbury to Little Rock: The Struggle for Educational Equality for African Americans" focuses on African American education in the United States from Prudence Crandall's attempts to open a school for young black women in Canterbury, Connecticut, in the early 1830's, through the integration attempts by nine African American students at Arkansas' Little Rock Central High School. The Arkansas episode became the symbol and focus for the controversy over school segregation, following the 1954 Supreme Court decision in Brown v. the Board of Education of Topeka, which determined that the "separate but equal" doctrine, which provided a legal basis for segregated schools, was wrong. "The Battle of Bentonville: Caring for Casualties of the Civil War" explains the history of medical care in the Union Army in the field from the battles of First Manassas in 1861 to the Battle of Bentonville, North Carolina, in 1865. The lesson plan is accompanied by photographs of Civil War field medicine, two maps showing General Sherman's march through the Confederacy and the Battle of Bentonville, and four readings demonstrating the development of Union medicine during the Civil War, including several personal observations. This lesson plan is based on the National Register of Historic Places registration file, "Bentonville Battleground State Historic Site" and was written by John C. Goode, Historic Site Manager at Bentonville Battleground State Historic Site, and Elaine Beck, Curator of Education for the North Carolina Historic Sites Section. URL: www.cr.nps.gov/nr/twhp

Visit the new online lesson plan from Teaching with Historic Places , "Two American Entrepreneurs: Madame C.J. Walker and J.C.Penny." This lesson plan, completing a series placed on the web for Women’s History Month, relates the history of Madame C.J. Walker, creator of a popular line of African American hair care products and cosmetics, and the history of James Cash Penny's business venture, the Golden Rule Store, a dry goods business that grew into the J.C.Penny Company. Visit the Teaching with Historic Places web site at www.cr.nps.gov.nr/twhp to learn more about these lesson plans as well as how the program can help educators and preservationists work together to incorporate historic places into the curriculum.

A second Teaching with Historic Places lesson plan, "Life on an Island: Early Settlers Off the Rock-Bound Coast of Maine," explores the history and occupations of the seafaring Hadlock family and the farming Gilleys of Baker Island. The lives and occupations associated with northern coastal life, as well as the lives of everyday people in the 19th century, are explored through this new on-line lesson plan.

In honor of National Park Week, Teaching with Historic Places (TwHP) introduces a new online lesson plan, "Camp Misty Mount," tells the story of this Maryland camp's creation by the Works Progress Administration (WPA) and the Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC) during the New Deal era of the 1930's. Today located within Catoctin Mountain Park, this lesson plan concentrates on explaining the important role forests play in local economies, and describes the concept of rustic architecture and why this style was so well suited for the construction of Camp Misty Mount. Additionally, the lesson plan outlines the tasks completed at Misty Mount by the Works progress Administration and explains why this government program had both local and national significance. Written by Debra Mills, a Park Ranger at Catoctin Mountain Park, the lesson plan, complete with map, photographs and other study materials, is available to educators online at www.cr.nps.gov/nr/twhp

The National Landmarks Committee of the National Park System Advisory Board on April 10, 2000, voted to recommend 19 properties to the Secretary of the Interior for designation as National Historic Landmarks (NHL). The proposed NHLs are located in the following states: Connecticut, Indiana, Iowa, Kentucky, Maine, Massachusetts, Montana, New York, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, and Vermont. There were no major issues raised or substantial discussion undertaken in the consideration of Landmark designation for these properties. National Register of Historic Places Honors Asian-Pacific Heritage Month

"Celebrating Asian-Pacific Heritage Month May 2000" highlights featured historic sites, publications, related articles, and links to History in the Parks which tell the history of the Asian and Pacific peoples role in the development of the United States from the early 1800s to the present. The National Park's Golden Spike National Historic Site, featured on the site, interprets the social, labor, and ethnic history surrounding the connection of the first Transcontinental Railroad, largely achieved through the labor of Asian immigrants, which took place on May 10, 1869. Other historic sites tell the story of Asian immigration and assimilation into the United States. Related articles featuring Hawaiian and Pacific Island perspectives on preservation can be linked to in the "related articles" section and the "History in the Parks" section. Visit the National Register's site honoring May as National Asian-Pacific Heritage Month at National Register of Historic Places Home

The publications found on this site come through Teaching with Historic Places, the program which offers a series of award-winning lesson plans that use places listed in the National Register to enliven the study of history, social studies, and geography and include "Locke and Walnut Grove: Havens for Early Asian Immigrants in California."

National Register of Historic Places Honors Asian-Pacific Heritage Month

"Celebrating Asian-Pacific Heritage Month May 2000" highlights featured historic sites, publications, related articles, and links to History in the Parks which tell the history of the Asian and Pacific peoples role in the development of the United States from the early 1800s to the present. The National Park’s Golden Spike National Historic Site, featured on the site, interprets the social, labor, and ethnic history surrounding the connection of the first Transcontinental Railroad, largely achieved through the labor of Asian immigrants, which took place on May 10, 1869. Other historic sites tell the story of Asian immigration and assimilation into the United States. Related articles featuring Hawaiian and Pacific Island perspectives on preservation can be linked to in the "related articles" section and the "History in the Parks" section. Visit the National Register’s site honoring May as National Asian-Pacific Heritage Month at National Register of Historic Places Home.

The publications found on this site come through Teaching with Historic Places, the program which offers a series of award-winning lesson plans that use places listed in the National Register to enliven the study of history, social studies, and geography and include "Locke and Walnut Grove: Havens for Early Asian Immigrants in California."

Join the National Register in celebrating Preservation Week! Established in 1971 by the National Trust for Historic Preservation, the event is co-sponsored by local preservation groups, state historical societies, and business and civic organizations across the country. During Preservation Week, many events are planned to promote historical places for the purpose of installing national and community pride, promoting heritage tourism, and showing the social and economic benefits of historic preservation. Thousands of people participate in Preservation Week celebrations. Log on to our website at National Register of Historic Places for a list of activities in your area. The National Register of Historic Places recognizes the efforts of individuals concerned with protecting the Nation's heritage by highlighting two National Historic Landmarks: Woodlawn in Alexandria, Virginia, and the Henry Whitfield House in Guilford, Connecticut, significant for their contribution to the early historic preservation movement in the United States. Preservation links to State offices and activities from the National Trust's nationwide listings are provided, as well as lesson plans from Teaching with Historic Places, the award winning program that uses historic places to enliven the study of history and other subjects in the humanities for teachers and students alike.

Washington, D.C.--Secretary of the Interior Bruce Babbitt announced the designation of 15 properties in 10 states as National Historic Landmarks (NHL). The designated sites were recommended to the Secretary by the National Park System Advisory Board for their national significance in American history and culture.

A site is recognized as a NHL because of its historical importance to the entire nation. Only 2310, or roughly 3% of the 71,000 sites listed in the National Register of Historic Places have been selected for landmark designation. The Historic Sites Act of 1935 authorizes the Secretary of the Interior to recognize historic places judged to have exceptional value to the nation. The newly designated sites appear below.

For more information contact Patty Henry of the National Historic Landmark Survey. Ph. 202-343-8163, E-mail: Patty_Henry@nps.gov (Patty_Henry@nps.gov)

Visit the new Teaching with Historic Places feature page, "Civil War History." These lesson plans, based on sites listed in the National Register of Historic Places, are free and ready for immediate classroom use by students in history and social studies classes. Lesson plans such as "Choices and Commitments: The Soldiers at Gettysburg," and "The Battle of Bentonville: Caring for Casualties of the Civil War," raise important themes in Civil War history.

Another new Teaching with Historic Places lesson plan, Roadside Attractions, follows the highways of the 1920s and 1930s, exploring the whimsical, extravagant architecture that came with American auto culture. This new online lesson plan also investigates the ways in which automobiles changed local communities, and finds an example of fanciful, vernacular architecture and researches what is being done to preserve it. Discover these and additional lesson plans at Teaching with Historic Places

Examine the National Register of Historic Places' Teaching with Historic Places new lesson plan, "Carnegie Libraries: the Future Made Bright". This lesson plan helps educators and students understand Andrew Carnegie as a man whose beliefs mixed aggressive capitalism with a commitment to public philanthropy. Between 1866 and 1919, Carnegie's donations of more than $40 million paid for 1,679 new library buildings in communities large and small across America. This lesson plan helps the reader understand the motives behind the Carnegie library movement in early twentieth century America.

Another new Teaching with Historic Places lesson plan, Roadside Attractions, follows the highways of the 1920s and 1930s., exploring the whimsical, extravagant architecture that came with American auto culture. This new online lesson plan also investigates the ways in which automobiles changed local communities, and finds an example of fanciful, vernacular architecture and researches what is being done to preserve it. Discover these and additional lesson plans at Teaching with Historic Places

New NRIS Launched!

A new, much improved, National Register Information System (NRIS), a computerized index which holds information on every property listed on the Register, is up and running. Search for a historic site by name, agency, theme, or location. The name, location and agency categories each include several ways of defining your search. Once the database matches your search query, it will provide you with the name of the properties, their addresses, and links to pertinent Web sites that may provide further information. While full text versions of National Register nominations are not currently available, we encourage you to visit the links to pertinent Web sites, when provided, to get more complete information. Each searchable category page has numerous selections to aid in defining your search and a Help section with links to general information you should know about how to use the NRIS system including screen navigation and running reports, exporting and downloading, and trouble shooting tips.

Established under the National Historic Preservation Act of 1966, the National Register has identified and documented, in partnership with state, federal, and tribal preservation programs more than 71,000 districts, sites, buildings, structures, and objects that are significant in American history, architecture, archeology, engineering, and culture. Go to National Register Information System for further information on the new NRIS

Celebrate America's 224th birthday with the National Register of Historic Places Teaching with Historic Places. To honor Independence Day and generate public appreciation for our nation's history, Teaching with Historic Places is featuring five online lesson plans that are related to America's battle for independence and the creation of our nation. Joining lesson plans on the Battle of Bunker Hill, the Liberty Bell, The Washington Monument, and Glen Echo Plan, is the newly posted "Guilford Courthouse: A Pivotal Battle in the War for Independence." This new lesson plan, written for students and educators alike, highlights the Battle of Guilford Courthouse, where British general Lord Charles Cornwallis lead his 1,900 British regulars against American Major General Nathanael Greene's army of 4,400 troops stationed near the Guilford Courthouse, in North Carolina. Although the battle was technically a British victory, the serious losses of manpower left the British too weak to occupy outposts in North Carolina or pursue the defeated, but intact, American Army. Soon Lord Cornwallis would make the decision to march into Virginia, where he would face defeat at Yorktown. The lesson plan, with maps, readings, visual images and activities, can be found at our Independence Day feature online at Teaching with Historic Places.

New Online Travel Itinerary Celebrates Virginia's Historic Piedmont Region

On July 11, 2000, the National Register of Historic Places unveiled its newest travel itinerary, "Journey Through Hallowed Ground." This new travel itinerary features an online tour covering 64 historic places in a 75 mile region, highlighting historic sites from the 1700’s to the present century. The National Register, in partnership with Scenic America, created the travel itinerary highlighting Virginia's Piedmont region which honors the soldiers, statesman, farmers, free blacks and slaves who fought, toiled, and governed in the region. The Piedmont region, called the "cradle of democracy" for its association with Thomas Jefferson, James Madison, George Washington, James Monroe and Supreme Court Justice John Marshall, became one of the most contested grounds in the Civil War. The itinerary reflects both the early American experience and the Civil War with such sites as Monticello and Manassas Battlefield. Other sites include historic districts, churches, battlefields, taverns and mills found in the eight county region of the Piedmont. Following U.S. Route 15, the online travel itinerary provides a map which can be broken down into 3 detailed site maps.

Each of the Piedmont historic sites has a brief written description of the site's significance, including color photographs, directions and public accessibility information. At the bottom of each page, the visitor will also find a navigation bar containing links to four essays that explain more about Piedmont history, the Civil War in the region, and Preserving the Piedmont. "Journey Through Hallowed Ground" is an example of the Department of Interior's strategy to revitalize communities by promoting public awareness of history and can be found at the National Register of Historic Places.

Explore the Allegheny with the new online lesson plan, "Allegheny Portage Railroad: Developing Transportation Technology," which follows 19th-century travelers as they cross the treacherous Allegheny Mountains using an innovative inclined railway. Read about the social and economic effects of one of the nation's great canal systems in "The Building of the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal." Understand why the Washington Railway and Electric Company of Washington, D.C., which was responsible for the installation of the electric railway system or "trolley system" throughout the city and its suburbs, purchased the Chautauqua lands and expanded the small amusement park that had already been built on the site in "Glen Echo Park: Center for Education and Recreation." Examine St. Louis's handsome Courthouse as a gathering place for pioneers heading west and a possible option for being the center of the transportation revolution in "The Old Court House in St. Louis: Yesterday & Today." These and more transportation related lesson plans can be found at www.cr.nps.gov/nr/twhp. The lessons, based on sites listed in the National Register of Historic Places, are free and ready for immediate classroom use by students in history and social studies classes.

The National Register of Historic Places' Teaching with Historic Places explores the history of railroad transportation in Chattanooga, Tennessee. Visit our new online Teaching with Historic Places lesson plan, "Chattanooga, Tennessee: Train Town" at www.cr.nps.gov/nr/twhp. The city of Chattanooga, made famous by Glen Miller and his orchestra's 1941 song "Chattanooga Choo-Choo," has been a hub of rail transportation both for geographic and economic reasons. Chattanooga's location, on the Tennessee River, at a natural break where the Allegheny and Cumberland ranges converge, made it an appealing site for rail transportation. By laying the rail tracks through Chattanooga, the emerging rail industries hoped to reach and dominate lucrative markets west of the mountains. The lesson plan, with accompanying maps, photos, and activities, is an ideal teaching tool for educators and students.

The Park History web site at www.cr.nps.gov/history has placed three publications online. "Yellowstone National Park: Its Exploration and Establishment," by Aubrey L. Haines, "Interpretation in the National Park Service: A Historical Narrative," by Barry Mackintosh and "Robert Stanton: Director of the National Park Service," a short biography. Found online at the Park History web site, the publications allow public accessibility to historical studies about the National Park Service.

The National Park Service (NPS) has a major stake in living up to the public's trust of presenting an accurate and comprehensive view of the past. More than 220 of the 377 National Park sites are cultural sites, focusing on history, anthropology, and archaeology. Visitors come to these parks seeking education and inspiration, sometimes long after their years in the classroom are over. For them, these 220 parks are sources of educational experiences, vessels of historical memory, and sometimes places that loom large in questions about personal and national identity. Among the tools that the NPS uses to try to meet these challenges is a thematic framework, intended as a comprehensive outline of broad themes in U.S. history to assist in communicating American history to the public. Initially developed in 1936, the framework has been particularly useful as a tool for evaluating how well the National Park System reflects the sweep of American history (the framework can be seen at http://www.cr.nps.gov/history/thematic.html; a discussion about the framework is at www.cr.nps.gov/history/implementing.htm).

In honor of the National Park Service's restoration and reopening of the Washington Monument, the National Register of Historic Places, Teaching with Historic Places (TwHP) program launched a new Web feature highlighting the TwHP lesson plan, "The Washington Monument: Tribute in Stone", which examines George Washington and the famous monument erected in his honor. The online lesson plan comes with a map, visual images and activities for both educators and students. It also explains the long history of constructing the monument, which was interrupted in March 1854, by members of the anti-immigrant American Party--better known as the "Know-Nothings". How the Washington Monument was saved, and how it differs today from the original design, makes for fascinating reading. Find out more at www.cr.nps.gov/nr/twhp

Visit the National Register of Historic Places website at http://www.cr.nps.gov/nr for information on current online announcements about publications, teaching aides, National Register Travel Itineraries and the National Register Information System (NRIS), a computerized database that contains information on every property listed in the National Register. Additional information about the National Register, including how to list a property and the results of listing a property in the National Register, can be found here with available contact information, helpful in starting the process of recognizing a property that is significant to the Nation, State, or the community. Links leading to the online lesson plans prepared by the Teaching with Historic Places (TwHP) program help teachers bring historic places into the classroom, and the National Register Travel Itineraries educates travelers by guiding them to places important in America's history.

The New National Register Bulletin, "Telling the Stories: Planning Effective Interpretive Programs for Properties Listed in the National Register of Historic Places", provides planning strategies for those who want to get involved teaching and interpreting our nation's historic places. Written by Ron Thomson, Interpretive Consultant in Oneonta, New York, and Marilyn Harper, Historian at the National Register of Historic Places, the bulletin defines the role of education as an important tool in historic preservation. This bulletin is intended to help individuals and organizations develop effective programs to convey the meaning of historic places to the public using the information in National Register documentation and other sources. Telling the stories of historic places to the public can expand understanding of the mission of federal, state, local, and tribal governments striving to protect historic properties, create support for historic preservation efforts, make private preservation projects more profitable, encourage individual initiative in protecting aspects of a community's heritage, and, in the process, improve the quality of life in and even the chances of survival of communities nationwide. The bulletin outlines a simple planning process for developing effective interpretation programs, as well as places to go for further information. To order the bulletin free of charge, please call the reference desk at the National Register of Historic Places: (202) 343-9559 or e-mail: nr_reference@nps.gov

Explore the history of one of the Supreme Court's most powerful judicial leaders, John Marshall, as the National Register of Historic Places' Teaching with Historic Places presents: "The Great Chief Justice at Home". This lesson plan focuses on John Marshall's home, located at the corner of Ninth and Marshall Streets in downtown Richmond, Virginia. It is here where he developed legal opinions, wrote public papers, and greeted famous guests at his place, where he also was a father, husband, and household manager. Presented online for educators and students, the lesson plan, using maps, readings, images, and activities, describes John Marshall's career from successful Virginia lawyer to powerful Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. As Supreme Court Justice, from 1801-1835, Marshall wrote and presided over many Supreme Court decisions that used broad construction of the Constitution to support the Federal government's power in its relationship to the state of the federal union. Some of the Marshall Court's decisions infuriated his cousin, Thomas Jefferson, who served as President of the United States from 1801-1809. Take an online trip to the National Register of Historic Places newest Teaching with Historic Places lesson plan: Bethlehem, Pennsylvania: a Moravian Settlement in Colonial America. This newest lesson plan, available to educators and students, tells the history of a Moravian community that purchased a 500 acre tract of land north of Philadelphia in 1741. There, along the Lehigh River, they organized and built the communal society of Bethlehem, which became the base location for all Moravian missionary activity in North America. The Protestant group known as the Moravians originated in the 15th century in Bohemia and Moravia, both in the present-day Czech Republic. The lesson provides a useful contrast to the Puritan settlements in New England and the Quaker and other religious settlements in Pennsylvania. Bethlehem, Pennsylvania will help students understand why Moravians immigrated to the New World and how the communities they established embodied their religious beliefs. This new online lesson plan covers the time period from the mid-to-late 18th century. Complete with readings, images, a map, and activities for students, the lesson plan can be found at www.cr.nps.gov/nr/twhp

The National Register of Historic Places is pleased to help foster the general public’s awareness, understanding, and appreciation for Hispanic culture during National Hispanic Heritage Month, September 15-October 15. As part of the celebration, the National Register of Historic Places invites online visitors to come to our celebrate Hispanic Heritage Month website. This site highlights various publications, properties listed in the National Register of Historic Places, and National Parks that deal directly with the ingenuity, creativity, cultural, and political experiences of Hispanic Americans. Join the National Register of Historic Places in recognizing and exploring the achievements of a people that have contributed so much to American culture. The National Hispanic Heritage Month website includes links to online publications, such as the new Teaching with Historic Places lesson plan, "Castolon: A meeting Place of Two Cultures." This lesson plan explores Hispanic influences along the Texas-Mexico border region of the Rio Grande. Featured historic properties include Lamesa Farm Workers Community Historic District in West Texas and the Padua Hills Theater, which explores the unique theatrical group called the Mexican Players, who performed Spanish language folk dramas for over forty years. The History in the Parks section offers numerous links to places important in Hispanic history, including the Juan Bautista de Anza National Historic Trail. The National Hispanic Heritage Month site can be found at www.cr.nps.gov/nr/ and will be available as of Friday 9/15/2000.

Take an online trip to Texas with the National Register of Historic Places newest Teaching with Historic Places lesson plan: Castolon: A meeting Place of Two Cultures. Set below the towering cliffs of the Sierra Ponce, Castolon is a small trading and farming community in far southwest Texas where the histories and cultures of the United States of America and Mexico mix along the international border. As the rest of the U.S. entered the industrial age, the section of West Texas along the Rio Grande remained a frontier society, made dangerous by the spill over from the 1910 Mexico Revolution. Bandits and raiders invaded the area, and the U.S. Army responded by commissioning permanent and temporary camps along the Rio Grande. Camp Santa Helena, or Castolon, located in the southwest corner of today’s Big Bend National Park, was created by two brothers, who named their business La Harmonia Enterprises, a name they felt would create harmony between the peoples of the border region. The lesson provides a useful study of life on the border region, where early settlers crossed the boundary freely. Castolon: A Meeting Place of Two Cultures is complete with readings for students, online maps of the region, images and activities. Useful for both educators and students alike, this newest lesson plan, corresponding with National Hispanic Heritage Month, helps students understand westward expansion and United States geography. Students can use this lesson plan to practice map reading, and analyze photographs and primary documents. The lesson plan can be found at www.cr.nps.gov/nr/twhp

The National Register has recently published a new bulletin entitled, Telling the Stories: Planning Effective Interpretive Programs for Properties Listed in the National Register of Historic Places. It outlines a simple process for planning effective public education programs at historic places and includes some great case studies. The bulletin emphasizes the usefulness of information collected in the survey and registration process and the documentation in National Register files in developing interpretive programs. Nominating and listing properties in the National Register is the first step. Using that information to "tell the stories" of these places to the general public is critical to ensuring their long-term preservation. For copies of the bulletin, please contact the National Register reference desk at 202/343-8012 or by e-mail at nr_reference@nps.gov. The bulletin is also available on the National Register Web site at www.cr.nps.gov/nr/

Want to know more about the Gold Rush Era in Seattle? Or warships associated with World War II in the Pacific? Then visit the National Park Service History Web Page. Visitors will find additional information online that features different aspects of National Park history. Recent online articles, like "Confinement and Ethnicity: An Overview of World War II Japanese American Relocation Centers" are presented along with links to other sites dealing with Maritime History, Research & Education. Some online features, like "Categories of National Significance," break down the specific areas which the National Park Service has been established to preserve, by various Acts of Congress, those legacies of individuals, historical, natural and cultural places and events that are worthy of the Nation's concern. Other helpful features include "Ask a Question," and "Today in History." Check out the National Park Service History Web Page at www.cr.nps.gov/history

Visit our newest online Cultural Resource Magazine (CRM), Creative Teaching with Historic Places. The most recent issue of CRM features articles designed for educators, teachers, historians, site interpreters and interested people involved in interpreting history for the benefit of the public and our nation's young. Articles such as "Teaching with the National Register of Historic Places," "Visualizing History-Inquiring Minds Want to Know," "Developing the Next Generation of Preservation Professionals," and "Teaching with Historic Places Makes a Splash on the Web," point to the success of the Teaching with Historic Places(TwHP) program, various strategies the program suggests in interpreting history, and the challenges awaiting educators in the future. Other articles, such as "Collaboration in Teaching with Historic Places," "Teaching with Historic Places in the Classroom," "Teaching with Historic Places in the Parks," and "Solving Local History's Mysteries -Researching Buildings for Fifth-Grade Teaching," present hands on experience reports from the field, offering teacher strategies in interpreting and implementing the TwHP program. Formally organized in 1991, the National Register’s Teaching with Historic Places set out to demonstrate how historic places-as both tangible links to the past and also sources of evidence-can help teach academic subjects, raise awareness of available information about places, and foster an appreciation for the value of cultural resources. To celebrate Native American History and generate public appreciation for diverse cultures, the National Registers' Teaching with Historic Places (TwHP) has posted two lesson plans on the web that consider important aspects of Native American history. "The Battle of Horseshoe Bend: Collision of Cultures" explores the complex political and cultural differences that existed between European Americans and American Indians during the 19th century and learn how these conflicting views ultimately affected the Creeks. "San Antonio Missions: Spanish Influence in Texas" examines a group of 18th-century missions in modern San Antonio to learn about Spanish influence on native peoples and the patterns of Texas culture.

TwHP has also placed a new online lesson plan dealing with the Civil War. "Fort Morgan and the Battle of Mobile Bay", tells the story of Union Admiral David Farragut's attack on Mobile Bay, Alabama, on August 5, 1864, and the sinking of his lead ironclad, the USS Tecumseh, by a Confederate mine. Although a Union victory, it was achieved at high cost, as the ironclad Monitor ships were thought unsinkable--yet it took the Tecumseh just two minutes to go down to a watery grave. Seven more Union Ships, including two ironclads, sank while clearing the many torpedoes, a loss which provided a particularly painful illustration of how changing technology affects the men fighting a war. These lessons, complete with maps, visual images, activities and readings, are free and ready for immediate use by students and educators at www.cr.nps.gov/nr/twhp

The National Register's Teaching with Historic Places (TwHP) presents its newest online lesson plan, "The North Carolina State Capitol: Pride of the State". Learn why early 19th-century public buildings in the United States were designed in the Greek Revival architectural style while exploring North Carolina's state capitol on Union Square in downtown Raleigh, a city specifically created in 1792 to serve as North Carolina's permanent capital. This newest TwHP lesson plan, complete with visual photos, readings, floor plans and a map showing early meeting sites for the state legislature, is created for both educators and students to use as a research tool. North Carolina became a royal colony in 1729, but royal rule ended in 1775 when the royal Governor fled during the Revolutionary War. The town of Raleigh was mapped and laid out specifically to serve as the capital in 1792. To view this and other lesson plans, go to www.cr.nps.gov/nr/twhp

The new and revised National Register of Historic Places bulletin on archeology is here. "Guidelines for Evaluating and Registering Archeological Properties" updates the previous archeological bulletin with additional information on prehistoric sites. The purpose of this bulletin is to assist in the documentation of archeological properties for the National Register. Across the United States, archeological properties are a finite and increasingly threatened cultural resource. As the only official national listing of important archeological properties, the National Register is a valuable tool in the management and preservation of our increasingly rare archeological resources. In many ways, a National Register nomination often is similar to a synopsis of an archeological research report. This bulletin informs the researcher who prepares National Register nominations, how archeological properties are identified, and how to evaluate their significance. Also included is information on establishing boundaries for archeological sites, mapping sites, and guidelines for photographing. To order your free copy, e-mail us at nr_reference@nps.gov or call: 202-343-9559.

New features have been added to the National Park Service web page. "America's National Park System: The Critical Documents," and "Mission 66 Visitor Centers" can be found at www.cr.nps.gov/history. "America's National Park System: The Critical Documents," tells the origins of the national park idea which began during the Civil War with the need to preserve Yosemite Valley's scenic beauty in the Sierra Nevada mountains of California. Although Yellowstone became the nation's and world's first national park, much of the ground-laying of national park policy came from recommendations on the management of Yosemite valley by eminent landscape architect Frederick Law Olmsted. This feature explores the National Park System's origins through the New Deal Years, World War II and the present, with numerous historic documents defining the changing issues confronting the National Parks and nation at large. "Mission 66 Visitor Center" tells the story of Mission 66, which began as a movement to launch the park service into the modern age after it had languished after the New Deal. Mission 66 would allow the Park Service to repair and build roads, bridges and trails, construct new facilities ranging from campsites to administration buildings, conserve resources and obtain land for future parks. Begun in 1954, the Mission 66 Visitor centers tell the story of such places as Quarry Visitor Center, Dinosaur National Monument, in Jensen, Utah, the Wright Brothers National Memorial Center in Kill Devil Hills, North Carolina and the Painted Desert Community in Petrified Forest National Park, Apache County, Arizona.

As part of the National Register's celebration of Native American History, Teaching with Historic Places (TwHP) presents a new online lesson plan, "Gran Quivera: a Blending of Cultures in a Pueblo Indian Village." In the remote Salinas Basin, in central New Mexico, stand the weathered ruins of three Puebloan villages and the 17th-century Spanish colonial missions that make up Salinas Pueblo Missions National Monument. Two ancient southwestern cultural traditions—the Mogollon and Anasazi—overlapped here and resulted in the Puebloan communities of Abó, Quarai, and Gran Quivera. From about A.D. 1000 to the 1600s, these three villages operated as major regional centers of trade with Indians from the Plains, the Pacific Coast, and the Great Basin. Gran Quivera, the largest of the Salinas villages, became a bustling community of 3,000 inhabitants. Beginning in the 16th century, the Spanish arrived. This lesson plan presents the conflict between the two cultures, with online maps, visual images, readings, an artist's conception of Gran Quivera, and activities for educators and students. For this and other online lesson plans, go to: www.cr.nps.gov/nr/twhp

The Director of the National Park Service is pleased to send you the following announcements and actions on properties for the National Register of Historic Places. For further information contact Edson Beall via voice (202) 354-2255, fax (202) 371-2229, regular or E-mail: Edson_Beall@nps.gov (Edson_Beall@nps.gov)

As part of the National Register’s continuing celebration of Native American History, Teaching with Historic Places (TwHP) presents a new online lesson plan, "Knife River: Early Village Life on the Plains.” This plan, created for educators and students, explores the Mandan, Hidatsa, and Arikara tribes who settled in the Upper Missouri River Valley in North Dakota. Their traditional life, centering on the village economy, the battle and the hunt, as well as their spiritual beliefs and rituals are explored before contact with European settlers became commonplace. Eventually, an influx of European-American fur traders set up trade patterns that undermined the tribe’s traditional position as brokers in a long-established American Indian trade network. This newest lesson plan contains readings, images, maps, and activities and can be found on the web at: www.cr.nps.gov/nr/twhp

The life of the Gilded Age artist Augustus Saint-Gaudens is celebrated in the National Register of Historic Place's Teaching with Historic Places newest online lesson plan. Augustus Saint-Gaudens, born in Dublin, Ireland, in 1848, went on to became a noted American sculptor. Making his mark at age 27 with his statue of Civil War Admiral David G. Farragut, Saint-Gaudens went on to complete other famous works, among them the Shaw Memorial in Boston, the seated Lincoln in Chicago, and the Sherman statue on Fifth Avenue in New York City. This newest online lesson plan, suitable for students and educators alike, explores Saint-Gaudens and the National Historic Site named after him with interactive readings, maps, visual images and activities. Included among the readings are Henry Adams' reflection on the Adams Memorial and Saint-Gaudens letter to then President Theodore Roosevelt who selected him to create the design for the new $10 and $20 gold pieces at the turn of the century. Saint-Gaudens created his New Hampshire home into a studio where he taught fortunate students while he battled cancer.
