1854

The Kansas-Nebraska Act repeals the Missouri Compromise, allowing popular sovereignty to determine slave-or free-state status of territories seeking statehood, which increases sectional divisions within the U.S. and breaks down the traditional two-party system, giving rise to the Republican Party.

1857

The Dred Scott decision by the Supreme Court denies any possibility of citizenship for African Americans, imperils fugitive enslaved Africans and sets back the cause of abolition.

1859

John Brown's unsuccessful Harper's Ferry, Virginia, raid to incite slave rebellion heightens tension over slavery.

December 20, 1860

South Carolina secedes from the Union after Abraham Lincoln's election as president, followed by 10 other states through May 1861.

February 1861

The seceding states establish the government of the Confederate States of America and create a constitution endorsing slavery but prohibiting the international slave trade.

April 1861

When Confederate forces fire on U.S. troops at Fort Sumter in the harbor of Charleston, South Carolina, President Lincoln calls for troops to put down the "insurrection" in the South, beginning the Civil War.

September 22, 1862

President Lincoln issues the Emancipation Proclamation, granting freedom to enslaved Africans in areas of the South in active rebellion on January 1, 1863.

1865

Slavery abolished in the U.S. by the 13th Amendment to the Constitution.

1866

14th Amendment to the Constitution defines a citizen as anyone born in the U.S. (except Native Americans) or naturalized, thereby extending all rights of citizenship to African Americans. The American Missionary Association (formerly the Amistad Committee) founds Fisk University, among other historically black colleges.

1870

The 15th Amendment to the Constitution is ratified. It gives African American men the right to vote, stating that the "right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or any state on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude."
