

Hi, welcome to the National Park Service Learning & Development landing page I'm Kathy Hanson.

I'm the Chief of Learning & Development and we're really glad you found us on the Internet.

In Learning & Development it's our goal to be the consultants of choice for all National Park Service learning needs. Toward that end we've created this website to help you understand better our training resources, our programs, the courses that we offer and more information about our training centers and how you can contact us. As a matter of fact on this site you will find information about how you can prepare an individual development plan, you'll find tools and resources for you individually or for your organization. It's important for you to stop back by often because we are going to be updating and adding content to this website continually, in fact we are going to be unveiling a new more comprehensive website in the coming months. In the meantime though please stop by frequently so that you can learn more about what's being offered, where its being offered and how it might fit into your schedule and your individual developmental plans.

Thanks, hope to see you soon.
