Administrative History

Yukon-Charley Rivers National Monument was proclaimed by President Jimmy Carter in 1978 under the Antiquities Act. Two years later, on December 2, 1980, the Alaska National Interest Lands Conservation Act (ANILCA) passed, converting the monument into Yukon-Charley Rivers National Preserve (YUCH). The purposes of the preserve, as outlined by ANILCA, were

To maintain the environmental integrity of the entire Charley River basin, including streams, lakes and other natural features, in its undeveloped natural condition for public benefit and scientific study; to protect habitat for, and populations of, fish and wildlife, including but not limited to the peregrine falcons and other raptorial birds, caribou, moose, Dall sheep, grizzly bears, and wolves; and in a manner consistent with the foregoing, to protect and interpret historical sites and events associated with the gold rush on the Yukon River and the geological and paleontological history and cultural prehistory of the area.

The creation of the monument in 1978 and its conversion into a preserve in 1980 were both met with significant protest from locals. Resistance to NPS presence in the area persisted for many years to follow. Perhaps the most notable among the protesters was gold miner and secessionist Joe Vogler, whose agitation of the Park Service came to a head in 1984, when he drove two pieces of heavy equipment from Circle, Alaska, 18 miles into the preserve before being halted by park officials. Vogler's clashes with NPS continued until his death in 1993.

In 1981, David Mihalic was installed as YUCH's first superintendent. He held the post for four years, until Donald Chase took over the job, serving from 1985 to 1993. From 1993 to 1995, Paul Guraedy was YUCH superintendent. The preserve's longest-serving superintendent to date was David Mills, who held the post from 1995 to 2007. Greg Dudgeon is the current superintendent.

Use of the land contained in YUCH has included subsistence uses, gold mining and sport hunting and fishing. The cultural heritage of the preserve is represented in its myriad archaeological sites and historic structures. One such structure, Slaven's Cabin, was restored by the Park Service and opened as a public use cabin in 1994 and now annually serves as a hospitality and dog drop site for the Yukon Quest dogsled race.

Yukon-Charley Rivers National Preserve comprehends 2,525,512 acres in east central Alaska. It encompasses 115 miles of the Yukon River and the entirety of the Charley River, which is designated a National Wild and Scenic River. Since the mid-1990s, it has been co-managed with Gates of the Arctic National Park & Preserve from the headquarters office in Fairbanks. A field office is located in Eagle, Alaska.
